BECKER BACKERS CLASH ON COUNSEL

Politicians Want Littleton, Wife Wants McIntyre, and His Brother Gets Elder.

LATTER QUICKLY WITHDRAWS

His Appearance in the Case Is a Surprise to John W. Hart, Becker's Own Choice.

WILL BE TRIED IN OCTOBER

Prisoner's Plea of "Not Guilty" Is Withdrawn Pending Test of Indictment's Legality.

ROSE NOT TAKEN TO COURT

Webber Gets Another Death Threat—Search in Catskills Kept Up—Suspects Seen Near Auburn.

Who will be the leading counsel for Lieut. Charles Becker when that officer is brought to trial at the October Term of court for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler who was shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole three weeks ago this morning? This question puzzled everybody about the Criminal Court Building yesterday.

When Becker was arraigned before Judge Mulqueen, in General Sessions, to plead to the indictment for murder, it was noted that, in addition to ex-Assistant District Attorney John W. Hart, who has been representing him, there was also present, and apparently representing the defendant, ex-Assistant District Attorney Robert H. Elder of Kings County, who will be remembered as the man who prosecuted the race-track interests at the beginning of the agitation that ended in the Hughes anti-race-track legislation.

Mr. Elder, however, did not remain in the case long. Less than five hours after he appeared in it his withdrawal was announced. No reason was given, and Mr. Elder refused to discuss the matter in any way, beyond admitting that he was no longer connected with the Becker defense. It was said that Mr. Elder's appearance was a complete surprise to Mr. Hart, but Mr. Hart, like Mr. Elder, refused to clear up the mystery behind the Brooklyn lawyer's sudden entry and even more sudden withdrawal from the case.

Out of the Elder incident grew a fine crop of rumors concerning Becker and his lawyers. One rumor was to the effect that Mr. Elder had been brought into the case by a person or persons closely related to the defendant, but that a misunderstanding soon arose, and that Mr. Elder, in order to clarify the situation, offered to and was permitted to withdraw.

McIntyre Visits Becker.

Mr. Elder was not out of the case half an hour before John F. McIntyre's name was brought into it. Mr. McIntyre, who has probably handled more murder cases, mostly as a county prosecutor, than any other man in New York, called on Becker in the afternoon. He was with him for about half an hour, and when he emerged from the Tombs the general understanding was that he had been retained by Becker. Mrs. Becker, the wife of the accused policeman, asked Mr. McIntyre to take up the defense of her husband. Mr. McIntyre, however, has not yet been retained in the case, although there is good reason to believe he will be before many hours have passed.

Mrs. Becker called at Mr. McIntyre's offices in the Broad Exchange Building at 25 Broad Street yesterday afternoon. With her was a man supposed to be one of Becker's brothers. She requested Mr. McIntyre to call upon her husband, and Mr. McIntyre said he would do so if the request was extended by Mr. Hart. Mr. Hart evidently extended the invitation, and Mr. McIntyre went to the Tombs, where he was soon joined by Mr. Hart.

When he came out of the Tombs Mr. McIntyre smilingly met the reporters with the announcement that he was still unretained and that he would remain so unless formally asked to enter the case by Mr. Hart. The impression created, however, was that Mr. Hart would invite him to take charge of the defense. The general opinion around the Criminal Court was that when Becker was arraigned for the third time to-morrow morning his affairs would be in the hands of Mr. McIntyre.

Politicians Want Littleton.

Hardly had the news gone abroad that Mr. McIntyre was to be the leading counsel for Becker when another report started that had some foundation in fact. This was to the effect that friends of Becker, men in whose judgment he has great confidence, had recommended Congressman Martin W. Littleton as the lawyer who could best handle his case when it comes before a jury next October. These friends were said to be closely affiliated with certain prominent politicians.

Out of this report grew another, which was to the effect that Becker balked at the retention of Mr. Littleton because of the fact that when Chief Inspector Schmittberger was up on charges six years ago Mr. Littleton was the man who successfully defended that officer. Becker and Schmittberger are not friends. In fact, Becker was one of the men responsible for the charges that were preferred against Schmittberger in 1906.

The rumors did not stop with Mr. Littleton. Another was hustled into the ring before the one about Littleton had grown cold. This time it was reported that ex District Attorney William Travers Jerome was to defend Becker. Mr. Jerome was out of town and was not expected at his office before the end of the week, but that did not keep his name out of the

SEARCHED BRITONS' YACHT.

Germans, Fearful of Espionage, Found All Sorts of "Evidence."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—The arrest of five English yachtsmen at Eckernförde on a charge of espionage was due to the fact that a member of the party, an artist named Gregory Robinson, with one of his companions, while taking photographs ashore, happened to have a new torpedo range within field of his camera.

The arrest was effected by an armed customs officer, who seems to have been dogging the yachtsmen since they unconsciously aroused the ire of the local officials by failing to report themselves at the Custom House immediately on their arrival in the bay.

As, in the German sense of the term, they could not "legitimate" themselves, the police went aboard, and arrested three of Mr. Robinson's companions, and ransacked the yacht.

Ordinary views of scenery such as every holiday-maker takes are gravely described by the officials as "topographical records of the coast," and are said to include pictures of warships and of the Kiel Canal sluices.

German official ignorance of English amateur yachting customs invests the fact that the yacht bears no name or number and carries only its club burgee with grave significance. The fact also that these gentlemen, described as of "distinguished appearance," should be sailing without a crew of paid hands strikes the Germans as most inexplicable and suspicious.

$10 BEEF HAS ARRIVED.

Prices in Chicago Jump Higher Than Since Civil War.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Notwithstanding the dissolution of the National Packing Company, the corporate name of the so-called Beef Trust, the price of beef continues to soar to levels attained only in time of war.

That the people of New York, and of the Atlantic States generally, will have to pay an extraordinarily high price for beef in the immediate future, trust or no trust, was demonstrated to-day, when prime corn-fed bullocks attained in the stockyards the topnotch price of $10.10 per hundredweight, a price not heretofore reached on this market since 1867, the period following the civil war.

A three-carload lot of heavy black steers bred by A. W. Bragg of Tuscola, Ill., sold for $10.10 a hundred, the first time in the records of the Chicago market since the war that beef on the hoof, except in the case of prize winning single animals, has sold as high as 10 cents a pound.

The same figure almost was touched in another deal when cattle raised by the same feeder, but slightly lighter in weight, sold for $10.05 a hundred.

The high price commanded by the two lots of steers was due, it was said, to the scarcity of choice cattle and the activity of competitive buyers to get hold of especially desirable steers. It was predicted, following the two sales, that the price would go even higher, one reason for which was the scarcity of range cattle.

Range cattle also set a new mark to-day when the price touched $8.25. Last year's high figure was $7.90.

From this the dealers in cattle predict that there will be a further and distinct advance in the price of beef before the end of the week.

Mutton and lamb hold at about last week's closing prices. There is no reason for an advance in prices on the part of retail dealers, the supply being large.

SUFFRAGIST HITS POLICEMAN

Magistrate Later Discharges Her for Lack of Evidence.

A well dressed woman, who later said she was Ira Bushnell Kirtland, 54 years old, living in the Darlington Apartments, Broadway and 101st Street, caused excitement last night, outside Healey's Restaurant, 2,463 Broadway, by proclaiming the rights of women to vote and by resisting arrest. She struck Policeman Harry Neushafer of the West 100th Street Station in the face, he reported, when he arrested her on the complaint of Charles McManus, manager of the restaurant.

According to the police, Mrs. Kirtland entered the restaurant unaccompanied, about 8 o'clock, and after dining began an impromptu address relative to woman's suffrage. This address, as Manager McManus later said, did not meet with the approval of the patrons in the restaurant, and Mrs. Kirtland was escorted to the street, where, it is alleged, she continued her discourse. She attracted a crowd of more than 200 persons, many of whom, in a spirit of mischief, applauded her.

There being no matron in the West 100th Street Station, Mrs. Kirtland was taken to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, where she was locked up on charges of disorderly conduct and intoxication.

When Mrs. Kirtland was arraigned in the Night Court Magistrate Herbert objected because the complaint against her was changed from intoxication to disorderly conduct.

"You arrest this woman, take her to the station house, charge her with intoxication, then change the complaint and bring her here accusing her of disorderly conduct," said the Magistrate, "and expect me to entertain this complaint."

The complainant was not present, and the Magistrate advised Mrs. Kirtland to see Commisssioner Waldo and complain to him of the treatment she suffered.

A. J. DALY A SUICIDE.

Democratic National Committeeman Shoots Himself in Alaska.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 5. — A. J. Daly, Democratic National Committeeman for Alaska, committed suicide early yesterday aboard a river steamboat near Tolovan, seventy miles west of here, while en route from Fairbanks to the Iditarod district. Mr. Daly shot himself through the head with a revolver. A Coroner's jury at Hot Springs Landing found that Mr. Daly was temporarily insane when he killed himself.

In accordance with a request in a will found on the body, the burial will be at Hot Springs. Mrs. Daly is visiting at St. Paul, Oregon.

TO FIX PANAMA TOLLS BEFORE ADJOURNING

Free-Canal Forces in Senate Compelling a Vote by Blocking Legislation.

TARIFF BILLS DISPOSED OF Steel and Wool Measures Sent to Taft and Veto Expected — One Head Likely for Canal Zone.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Fears harbored by the advocates of free passage for American ships through the Panama Canal that any further delay in settling the question of tolls would result in strengthening the hands of the supporters of a strict observance of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty resulted to-day in the Senate's resumption of the Panama Canal bill's consideration.

It had been expected that the bill would go over until next session, and such postponement would have been in the nature of a victory for the supporters of the treaty. But to-day, when the question of fixing dates for voting on various other measures came up, Senator Jones of Washington, an advocate of free American passage, gave notice that he would object to all unanimous consents until the Panama bill was out of the way.

That announcement at once put the no-toll men in control of the parliamentary situation, as a single objection is enough to block any bill on which unanimous consent is necessary in naming a day for a vote. In the general colloquy which ensued after Mr. Jones's announcement, all unanimous consents failed. The request of Mr. Simmons of North Carolina, that the Cotton bill be disposed of on Friday or Saturday, was lost in the shuffle, and a similar request for voting on the Panama bill failed, because Mr. Bristow of Kansas, who favors violating the treaty, was afraid that some speeches on his side of the question might not be delivered before the vote should come.

That left a legislative tangle from which the only outlet seemed to be in the disposing of bills in the regular order. The Post Office Appropriation bill, involving many disputed items, has displaced the Panama bill for about a week through the courtesy of Senator Brandegee. But the failure of the unanimous consents induced Senator Bailey to call at once for the regular order. That brought up automatically the Panama bill, and the detailed consideration of amendments was begun.

It looks now as if this consideration would proceed until a vote is reached. To-day, prominent Republicans, like Mr. Root and Mr. Lodge, indorsed the House provisions for a single Governor of the Canal Zone instead of three Commissioners, as proposed in the Senate amendment, and it looks as if the one-man rule would be adopted.

As to the toll question, no prediction can yet be made, though Senator Brandegee to-day gave it as his opinion that American coastwise ships would be given free passage through the canal in disregard of the terms of the treaty. It is not likely that this free passage will be given to the oceanic shipping, even if the owners of the ships pledge themselves to turn over their vessels as transports in case of war.

The taking up of the Panama bill today showed the anxiety of Senators to bring the session to an end. The tariff bills are being rapidly disposed of, and the President's veto will dispose of them all.

The Post Office bill, on which there is much debate, will probably get out of the way in a day or two after the Panama bill is sent to conference. The appropriation bills, with their various amendments, are being disposed of as fast as possible. Everything points to an early adjournment, and everybody in both houses is glad of it.

The Iron and Steel Tariff bill to-day received the signatures of Speaker Clark and Acting President Bacon of the Senate, and went to President Taft for his inspection. This is the first of the Tariff Revision bills passed by the Democratic-Progressive alliance in the Senate, to reach the Chief Executive, and close friends of the President express the conviction that he will veto it, because no investigation of the industry has been made by the Tariff Board, upon which to base a scientific tariff revision.

An attempt by the conferrees on the Excise Tax bill, to reach an agreement on that measure, was not successful. After a session of more than an hour, the Conference Committee adjourned until to-morrow. It is understood that the Democrats of the House have not fallen in with the plans of the Senate alliance on this measure.

Senator La Follette had but five Progressives behind him when he forced through the Senate the Compromise Wool Tariff bill, representing the agreement with the House between the rates of the La Follette and Underwood bills. The measure, which had passed the House last week, passed the Senate by a vote of 35 to 28; and, as soon as signed by the proper officers, will follow the Steel bill to the White House.

The Progressives who voted for the wool tariff revision were Senators Bristow, Clapp, Crawford, Gronna, La Follette, and Works. Senator Cummins was paired against the measure. He said that if free to vote he would oppose it because he believed the 29 per cent. ad valorem duty on wool much lower than could be justified by a study of the Tariff Board's report.

Senators Nelson, McCumber, Townsend, and others, also explained their opposition to the compromise bill on the ground that the rates and the basis of ad valorem tariffs were not in accord with the Tariff Board's recommendations.

Notice was served on the Senate to-day that under no circumstances would the House agree to a continuation of the Tariff Board. Provision for such continuation had been placed by the Senate in a number of appropriation and tariff measures, but to each and every such amendment the House has presented an unyielding front. To-day Senate leaders were notified that their insistence on that provision would delay adjournment.

AN AMERICAN FORCE LANDS IN NICARAGUA

One Hundred Bluejackets and Marines from the Annapolis Sent to Managua.

ORDER RESTORED BY THEM

Nicaraguan Government's Inability to Protect American-Owned Property Was Confessed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—At the request of the Diaz Government in Nicaragua the United States "intervened" yesterday afternoon, landing 100 bluejackets and marines from the gunboat Annapolis for the protection of American property. For the time being Minister Weitzel and Americans on the spot say the situation seems improved. But it is not unlikely that within the next few days a much larger force will be required, and in that case marines will be sent from Guantanamo.

The outbreak comes as an apparent setback to Secretary Knox's "dollar diplomacy" policy. It is pointed out, however, that should the situation in the little republic call for more serious intervention, in the end the Senate may be forced, for the protection of American interests in Nicaragua, to ratify the treaty now sleeping on the Senate executive calendar and guarantee a loan of $10,000,000. That loan, first offered by the Morgan syndicate, is now sponsored by the Whitney Central Bank of New Orleans, representing many individuals.

Should the ratification of the treaty, as the only means of insuring order in Nicaragua, result from the present demand for American marines in the republic, it would really prove a step forward for the Knox policy. That seems to look in general toward preserving stability in the smaller republics by putting them under bond to keep the peace. That would be insured by loans guaranteed by this Government, which would hold the National finances under strict control.

The immediate trouble yesterday arose from the seizure by Gen. Mena's rebol forces of vessels on Lake Nicaragua, belonging to the American syndicate operating the railroad and steamship line from the coast at Corinto into the interior. These vessels were used by the rebels in an effort to bombard the unfortified town of San Jorge.

When Minister Weitzel learned the facts and heard the protest of the Americans against this seizure of their property he took the matter up at once with the Diaz Government. The Nicaraguan Foreign Office gave him the answer that the Government was using every power at its command to maintain order and protect all foreign property, but could give no assurance of being able to do so. The Foreign Minister said he regretted that the entire force of the Government was required to put down disorders in various parts of the country, and he would not be able for the present to comply with the request of the American Minister. This answer came to Mr. Weitzel in a formal note, which closed with the request that the forces of the United States be employed to protect American citizens in Nicaragua

The fact is that the Nicaraguan Government, with a depleted treasury and a condition of starvation among portions of the population, is confronted with an impossible situation. The long delay in the American loan, which depends upon the ratification of the Nicaraguan treaty, has thrown the Nicaraguan Government into financial despair.

Minister Weitzel yesterday, after receiving the request that this country protect American property in Nicaragua, demanded of Gen. Mena that the property that had been seized be returned, and at once asked Commander Terhune of the Annapolis at Corinto to land a force to protect American property. Within a few minutes a hundred bluejackets were landed. At 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon they reached Managua, and quiet was restored there for the time being.

The Tacoma is on the way from Guantanamo to Bluefields, and will probably reach there to-morrow. The collier Justin arrived at Corinto to-day, but she has only a merchant crew, and would be of use simply to give protection to the cable station.

To-day's advices regarding the Nicaraguan revolution report that the Government forces have been defeated at Tipitapa, near Managua. Leon will probably be declared in a state of siege because of the release of a large number of political prisoners. The Government expects to protect the San Juan del Sur cable station.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Aug. 5.—Advices from Masaya, which has been in the hands of the adherents of Gen. Mena, are to the effect that Fort San Carlos has now been ocbcupied by the Government forces.

NOTED CRAFTSMAN A SUICIDE

Silversmith Odiot Shoots Himself—Feared Loss of His Eyesight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—Jean Baptiste Odiot, aged 89, a famous silversmith, who executed the handsome silver table service presented to the Czar when he visited France, shot himself dead to-day at Saint-Germain, it is supposed out of grief at the failure of his eyesight. For some time his eyes had been getting feebler, and he was afraid of losing his sight altogether.

He was a great-grandson of the jeweler Claude Odiot, who was intrusted by Napoleon with the making of the famous gold and silver cradle for the King of Rome. His grandfather was also a famous jeweler during the reign of Louis Philippe.

CHARGES GUARDSMAN WITH A SWINDLE

Col. Dyer Has Col. G. G. Cornwell of the Pennsylvania Guard Arrested Here.

MISSING FROM PHILADELPHIA

And a Warrant Out for Him There—Accounting Wanted of Estate He Managed.

Col. George R. Dyer, ex-Commander of the Twelfth Regiment, National Guard, and George Porter Corbett, secretary to Deputy Police Commissioner McKay, were standing at Twentieth Street and Broadway last night, about to enter Col. Dyer's motor car, when the Colonel observed a passer-by. He said to Mr. Corbett:

"There's a fellow that swindled me by selling me two bogus bonds some time ago. I never made a complaint against him because I heard the Philadelphia police were looking for him."

Mr. Corbett called Patrolman Rooney, who arrested the man. At Police Headquarters it was said that the man was sought as a fugitive from justice by the Philadelphia police.

The man said he was Gibbons G. Cornwell, 50 years old, a broker of West Chester, Penn The police said notice had been telephoned to Philadelphia, and that a detective from that city would arrive this morning with a warrant for Cornwell's arrest.

Ex-State Senator John Godfrey Saxe, attorney for Dyer, with offices at 30 Broadway, said last night the reason his client was taking such interest in the case was that Cornwell on last Thursday sold, through Dyer's firm, C. I. Hudson & Co., 36 Wall Street, two bonds amounting to $1,934. These bonds, Mr. Saxe said he had been informed, were the property of an estate in Philadelphia, of which Mr. Cornwell was attorney.

Mr. Saxe said he had been told that Cornwell was well known in Philadelphia, being a Colonel in the Sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Col. Gibbons Grey Cornwell, commander of the Sixth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, and a prominent attorney of West Chester, Penn., has been missing from his home since his regiment returned from camp last Wednesday.

Col. Cornwell was reported missing by his relatives yesterday. At the same time his father and partner, Capt. R. T. Cornwell, started an investigation of his business affairs at the request of beneficiaries of the will of Mrs. Alice Paschal Darlington Derrick, involving an estate of about $30,000.

The examination of the missing man's financial affairs was conducted while friends continued their search for him. Col. Cornwell had the handling of Mrs. Derrick's estate, and it is reported that it was to have been divided among certain institutions last week. When camp broke and the lawyer did not return with other West Chester members of the regiment, representatives of these institutions, it is said, demanded that an inquiry be made.

When it was discovered that no accounting could be made, a warrant was issued for his arrest by the heirs of the Derrick estate.

ELECTRICITY AS FOOD.

French Doctor Says He Has Found a New Treatment for Invalids.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—"If a man is hungry, give him electricity. If he asks for bread or beefsteak, put him in an electric chair and turn on the current."

This paradoxical method is recommended by Prof. Bergonie of Bordeaux, who has been telling his medical colleagues at Nimes of the curious results of his experiment.

According to the professor, food can be replaced by electricity as nourishment for the human system. Low tension and high frequency electric currents—that is, such currents as one gets from an induction coil or from the instruments often seen at fairs, which used to pass currents through persons holding the terminals—passing through the body, he says, have the same effect in producing interior warmth as meat and bread. But there is this advantage over food, that they do not tax the digestive organs.

These currents can be employed, the professor says, without the slightest deleterious effect.

Dr. Bergonie says his treatment will prove invaluable in the cases of invalids, who will be able to assimilate energy in an electric form. He adds:

"In many cases I observed that my electric treatment led to a notable increase of weight."

DOMINICANS FEAR WAR.

American Gunboats Held Ready for Possible Conflict with Haiti.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The gunboat Nashville is at Guantanamo, ready to steam at a moment's notice to Santo Domingo. The gunboat Petrel is at Puerto Plata, ready to respond to any call from the American Minister.

President Victorio of Santo Domingo is said to be preparing for trouble, yet no one seems to know just what is coming—a revolution in that country or war with its neighbor, Haiti. The Haitian authorities, which have a large force on the Dominican frontier, says their only purpose is to prevent the use of Haitian territory by Dominican rebels.

Gen. Vasquez, a veteran campaigner and aspirant to the Dominican Presidency, is reported to be organizing this rebellion near the Haitian boundary, and it is asserted that he has many secret adherents scattered throughout Santo Domingo who are ready for an uprising at any moment.

According to reports to Washington the United States Government probably holds the key to the situation, and a strong intimation from the State Department here would put a stop to the revolutionary propaganda. The State Department has not seen fit to give this word, feeling bound to remain neutral between factions, so long as no attempt is made to interfere with the Custom Houses, which are under American control, or with American citizens and their property.

A MOVE AGAINST GERMANY?

Paris Paper Hears of a New Franco-Russian Agreement.

PARIS, Tuesday, Aug. 6.—The Echo de Paris says that Russia has consented to sign an agreement with France binding herself not to treat with Germany on any European question without having previously discussed it and come to an agreement with France.

PASSES OUR SUBWAY BILL.

House Adopts O'Gorman Measure, Agreed To by Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The House today passed the O'Gorman bill, which has already passed the Senate, to permit the construction of a subway and the maintenance of a subway line under the Post Office Building at Park Place, New York City.

The House was informed by Mr. Underhill, who had charge of the bill on the floor, that a large part of the plan of improvement of the New York subway was suspended until the permission authorized in this bill was given.

DOUBLE SKIN FOR NEW LINER.

White Star Company Adopts Suggestion in Mersey Report.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug 6.—The Daily Telegraph has the following dispatch from Belfast:

"I am informed on excellent authority that, following the report of the Mersey Commission, the third vessel of the Olympic class, now being built for the White Star Line by Harland & Wolff, will have a double skin, rising well above the water line, the under shell being placed three feet from the outer shell or hull proper.

"A rough estimate places the cost of the second skin at £70,000 ($350,000,) but a more serious consideration is the loss of space, almost a quarter of a million cubic feet being absorbed by the new departure."

POLICEMAN SHOOTS HIMSELF.

"Everyone Thinks a Cop's a Crook," He Says, and Pulls Trigger.

Mounted Patrolman Tobin, attached to the College Precinct Station, tethered his horse outside Geibe's saloon, Fourth Avenue and Seventeenth Street, College Point, early this morning and went in to sit down. Tobin ordered drinks and then proceeded to talk with Mrs. Geibe and John Farrington, a blacksmith. He ended by saying:

"A man might as well be dead as to be a policeman. Everybody thinks a cop's a crook. A lot of people are always watching you, if you're on the force, to find something to report about you. You can't be free and be a policeman. Even if you get off the force, people are suspicious of you, just because you were on the police once. I've taken my horse out for the last time and I'll never do a tour of duty again."

With this Tobin pulled a heavy police revolver from its holster, pressed the muzzle to his right temple, and sent a bullet into his brain. Dr. A. S. Ambler, who was summoned from a house near by, found Tobin still alive and still sitting in the chair, with a half-consumed drink before him, but pronounced the wound mortal and sent Tobin to the Flushing Hospital.

Tobin was in full uniform when he shot himself. He was about to go off duty for the night. He is 35 years old, and lived with his wife and three children at College Point.

LEAVES LABRADOR TO WED.

Amelia Forbes, Society Girl Nurse, to Marry Raymond Emerson.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Amelia Forbes, a Vincent Club girl, daughter of J. Malcolm Forbes of Milton, who gave up society life to go to lonely Labrador to work as a nurse in the Grenfell Mission, is to wed young Raymond Emerson, grandson of the poet, and a Harvard 1911 graduate.

Miss Forbes, who is a cousin of Miss Dorothy Forbes and rich in her own right, returned to Boston in June, after six months spent at one of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's hospitals. The Emersons and Forbeses have been friends for years, and it is said that young Emerson has known Miss Amelia since childhood.

BRYANT STATUE DEFACED.

Vandals Sprayed Oil on Marble Memorial in Bryant Park.

The statue of William Cullen Bryant, its pedestal, and its surrounding canopy of marble, erected in the park which bears the name of the poet less than a year ago, were maliciously mutilated about six weeks ago, it was learned yesterday. Since that time two men have been working on the marble in an effort to erase the marks which vandalism left upon the poet's monument.

Whether the mutilation was the work of small boys, or of a naturally malicious person, or some one who objects to seeing statues in the parks is not known. Nobody has been arrested and there is no clue to the offender. All tha is known is that the mutilation took place about 5 o'clock in the evening during a day late in June. The pedestal and stairs at the base of the statue and the columns at the side were sprayed with oil of a variety which soaked into the marble and ruined the appearance of the monument.

After the mutilation was discovered chemists were put to work to discover what the oil was and what was likely to remove it. Shortly thereafter men were engaged to apply a certain compound, which looks like white plaster, to the oil-stained spots. Every day this is applied and every day washed off and more put on. The results are already beginning to be seen, as the pedestal is already nearly bare of the stains. The spots on the columns, however, are as glaringly evident as possible.

This act of vandalism has had the result of making the watchman much more active on the terrace end of the park. At the present time mothers with small children and small boys are not allowed on this terrace, which is reserved for quiet readers. It is said that one of the principal occupations of many who were accustomed to come on this terrace was the tearing up of the boxwood hedge.

HAIL NEW PARTY IN FERVENT SONG

"Battle Hymn of the Republic" Sways 1,000 Delegates to the Roosevelt Convention.

NO LEVITY, LITTLE CHEERING

Beveridge, in Opening Speech, Skillfully Plays on Fanaticism of His Audience.

JOHNSON ON THE TICKET

Slated to Run with Roosevelt—Negro Issue Still a Disturbing Factor.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 5.—About one thousand serious, earnest, almost fanatical men and women met in the Coliseum today at noon to create a new party. Every one of them believed that he or she was a crusader. There was no levity, and there was a solemn gravity that was striking and impressive.

To-day's work was all preliminary. To-morrow Col. Roosevelt will make his declaration of faith. On Wednesday a platform will be adopted and Col. Roosevelt will be nominated for President. Gov. Johnson of California will probably be named for Vice President.

Let no one mistake the Progressive Party. Theodore Roosevelt may or may not be bitten by personal ambition, but the men who are following him believe sincerely that they are followers of the Lord enlisted for the battle of Armageddon. They may be absolutely wrong about it, but about the strength of their conviction there cannot remain a doubt in the mind of anybody who saw the strange, moving, and compelling spectacle in the Coliseum to-day.

It was not a convention at all. It was an assemblage of religious enthusiasts. It was such a convention as Peter the Hermit held. It was a Methodist camp meeting done over into political terms. From Jane Addams of Hull House fame, sitting in the first rank below the platform, to Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, sitting half way down the hall, there was an expression on every face of fanatical and religious enthusiasm. Perhaps such men as William Flinn of Pennsylvania may have had a more worldly expression on their faces, but they were lost in the crowd of visionaries who listened to their Chairman, ex-Senator Beveridge, and believed—obviously and certainly believed—that they were enlisted in a contest with the Powers of Darkness.

Mr. Beveridge's speech was a great one in its apepal to the kind of sentiment that he knew to be prevalent in the convention. It was the best speech he ever delivered in his life. He knew the Lutheran and Garrisonian strain in his audience, and he skillfully bent his speech to that element. He is a phrasemaker equal to Col. Ingersoll. He has developed tremendously in the last few years. The sophomoric element has disappeared, and he is as polished and complete an orator as Martin Littleton.

Women Eager and Earnest.

The men and women before him listened with rapt faces. Some of them had their jaws set, and seemed to be biting their lips. Here and there men were seen wiping tears from their eyes. There was little cheering; the men and women were too earnest for it. They sat there, bent forward in their places, many of them with their hands to their ears, anxious to catch every word. When they did cheer it was always for some sentiment in which Beveridge expressed the aspiration of the new party for a better day for humanity. To his talk about details they remained callous.

The women were vastly in evidence. Most of them were old or middle-aged; the gay, half-serious, and brightly dressed crowd that represents woman suffrage in New York was largely absent. Every woman there was one whose name compelled respect. Miss Addams sat in the first row, and for an hour before the convention came to order she held a regular levee. There was not a moment when a procession was not passing in front of her, partly of women and partly of men. Everybody who came stopped to speak to her, and usually lingered for many minutes. Every one who stopped spoke to her with an earnest face and manner Miss Addams herself acted like a religious devotee. Once, when Mr. Beveridge committed the new party to woman suffrage she smiled and her eyes flashed. But mostly she sat with the same intent and almost reverent look on her face that the shouting Methodists and Presbyterians behind her wore.

The band played such airs as "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," Julia Ward Howe's famous hymn, and when the men and women delegates got up and joined in such songs they did it almost with frenzy. Everybody there, except possibly such calculating and sedate persons as William Flinn, unmistakably regarded himself as a soldier of the Lord.

No Ward Heelers There.

And here was another thing. It was a good-looking convention. Wherever you looked you saw clean-cut looking young fellows or old men who evidently stayed home at night and read the Bible. It looked less like the average Republican or Democratic Convention than anything you ever saw. The tough type was not there, that was all. It was like a convention of Sunday School Superintendents.

When the Rev. T. F. Dornblazer, Lutheran pastor, delivered the opening prayer, he was interrupted continuously with shouts of "Amen." Mr Beveridge wound up his speech with a quotation from Julia Ward Howe.

"Mine eyes have seen the coming of the glory of the Lord."

And the whole convention burst out spontaneously in song. They sang every verse of Mrs. Howe's majestic hymn, except one, and nobody had to tell them the words:

Mines eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword:
His truth is marching on.

I have seen Him in the watchfires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps.
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel;
"As ye deal with My contemners so with you My grace shall deal;
Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat:
Oh! be swift my soul to answer Him! be jubilant my feet!
Our God is marching on.

Different in "Purple Row."

Yes, it was a convention that was "different." The convention was to have met at noon, but it was an hour later before it began business. The delegations cheered each other as they came in, in a friendly and hospitable spirit, and when the band began playing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the Indiana delegation climbed its chairs and led the singing. The galleries were very sparsely filled, but this was not a gallery convention; it was a delegates' convention. The hall was the same as that in which Taft was nominated a few weeks ago, and the arrangements were so much the same that it seemed as if one convention might have adjourned over night and left the hall to the other. About the only difference was that the Texas delegation was to the left instead of the right of the hall, as it had been when the Republicans met.

"Purple row," where in June the millionaires' wives sat, presented a strangely different appearance. It was filled with women in shirtwaists and young girls, who occupied the same seats in which the "millionairesses" sat six weeks ago. The "millionairesses" used to sit with frozen faces, and the only time they woke to enthusiasm was when Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler issued orders to keep a Roosevelt woman enthusiast in her seat by force.

But the women there to-day did not cheer loosely, were intent and earnest, with a good deal of the attitude that Miss Addams assumed, and leaned forward and listened to the speeches with intent and rapt faces. Probably not one of them ever saw as much money in her life as one woman in "purple row" spends in a day. It was a different type, on the whole, a type that it was pleasanter to look at.

Sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Half an hour before the convention started the Indiana delegation suddenly jumped up on its chairs and began singing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." It has been sung in a half-hearted way in old party conventions before now, but it startled old and case-hardened Republicans to see how the Bull Moose sang it. You could see men, young men and old men, standing upon their chairs and singing "Our Fathers' God, to Thee, Author of Liberty," with tears in their eyes, and the look on their faces such as you might imagine on the faces of the men who backed Martin Luther after he had nailed his theses on the church door at Wittenberg, or the men who applauded Wendell Phillips when he indorsed Garrison's charge that the American Constitution was "a league with death and a covenant with hell." It slowly stole in on you that you were in a convention of fanatics, and that they knew it and were proud of it.

The red bandana, which for some reason is the Roosevelt emblem, was in evidence everywhere. Somebody in the Illinois delegation tied the bandana around the American flag and got a cheer. Men knotted their bandanas around their necks and stood up to yell. Most of them did not know how to tie the bandana. The Western cowboy does not knot his bandana around his neck for ornament; he does it for use. When he is riding across a desert on a cayuse he wants to wipe the perspiration off his face, and consequently he knots his bandana so that it will hang in front of his chin and that he can raise it to his face. But people who have read dime novels don't know that, and they imagine that the right way to knot your handkerchief is to let it flow down your back. The Pennsylvanians and New Yorkers did that, somewhat ludicrously, to-day, and "Boss" Flinn was especially conspicuous in a bandana that flowed over his spinal column instead of his chest. The Texas and Arizona men, of course, wore their bandanas the right way.

There was a hat surrounded by a ring, which was raised at intervals above the heads of the crowd and never failed to get a cheer.

Women were in evidence all over the floor, all well dressed, and most of them young. They promenaded down the aisles and talked to delegates, and most of them went up to Miss Addams and paid their respects to her. Oh, it was strangely unlike the usual convention.

Mrs. Longworth Not There.

It was the first convention in many a year that Mrs. Alice Longworth did not attend. Her usual seat, just over to the Chairman's right, was vacant. Everybody turned around and looked for her, but she was not there, and this in spite of the fact that Mrs. Longworth is catholic in her political tastes and attends Democratic conventions just as impartially as Republican ones.

Almost an hour late, Senator Dixon of Montana opened the convention. He has a resonant voice and a good presence, but even if he hadn't he would have been able to make an impression on the sincere and earnest men and women before him. The "kidding" atmosphere that characterizes most conventions, the brutal intolerance of long-winded speakers, was entirely missing, and if Dixon had been a poor speaker instead of a good one he would have met the same cordial reception.

Senator Dixon called on O. K. Davis to read the call, after he had made a short and very good speech telling about the origin of the third party movement, and the convention cheered wildly the names of its favorites, such as Judge Lindsey of Denver, Medill McCormick of Chicago, Cecil Lyon of Texas, Col. W. R. Nelson of Kansas City, Controller Prendergast, Timothy L. Woodruff, James R. Garfield, and others. The biggest ovation came when O. K. Davis read Senator Dixon's name. It was a case of flags, bandannas, white handkerchiefs, and everything else that could be waved to the accompaniment of shrieks and yells.

Then Senator Dixon introduced the Rev. Dr. T. F. Dornblazer, the Lutheran pastor, who was to offer prayer. Dr. Dornblazer's prayer sounded like a Brisbane editorial. It was a stump speech in favor of the Progressive Party, and it declared that the time had come to put a stop to the aggressions of the rich against the poor. Dr. Dornblazer read it from manuscript.

When he got through, the convention sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and if you have heard several thousand religious fanatics sing that song you can get some idea of its potentialities. Sung half-heartedly, it is a good hymn, but sung by a lot of people who mean what they are saying, it is majestic, impressive, and solemn.

Then Senator Dixon introduced Mr. Beveridge. The latter has grown since he went to the United States Senate in 1899. He is older, and he is a bigger man. His speech to-day was a phrase-making speech, but it was a good one.

"The Invisible Government."

There was one especial phrase that he repeated over and over again with an evident idea that it would make a keynote phrase for the campaign, and he used it very effectively. He said the bosses were not serving the country or their own parties, but were serving the financial interests that employed them, and these interests he called "the invisible Government."

Throughout his speech Beveridge drew a line between the outward and visible Government and "this invisible Government," and he recurred to it again and again. He did not get many cheers out of the intent and sober crowd before him, but the applause he got was worth a great deal more than the boisterous yelling that usually accompanies every good phrase in a National Convention. He spoke well. He got every ounce of meaning out of every word that he uttered.

"The people's Government," said he, "has been usurped by the 'invisible Government,' and the people's Government must be given back to the people again."

The cheer that this sentence got was nothing like the usual convention cheer. It sounded like a Georgia camp meeting expressing the sentiment that it was against the devil and in favor of heaven.

The biggest applause that Mr. Beveridge got was when he declared for woman suffrage. In most cases where men applaud the mention of woman suffrage, they do it with a grin. This time old men and young men alike got up on their chairs, yelled like wild Indians and waved anything available and portable. There was no half amused tolerance in their attitude; it was a conviction. They were for woman suffrage just as enthusiastically and earnestly as they were for Beveridge's favorite reform of abolishing child labor.

Next to that the greatest applause was for his plan to break down the "Solid South."

Beveridge States Party's Principles.

Mr. Beveridge said in part:

"We stand for a nobler America. We stand for an undivided Nation. We stand for a broader liberty, a fuller justice. We stand for social brotherhood as against savage individualism. We stand for an intelligent co-operation instead of a reckless competition. We stand for mutual helpfulness instead of mutual hatred. We stand for equal rights as a fact of life instead of catchwords of politics. We stand for the rule of the people as a practical truth instead of a meaningless pretense. We stand for a representative Government that represents the people. We battle for the actual rights of man.

"To carry out our principles we have a plain programme of constructive reform. We mean to tear down only that which is wrong and out of date, and where we tear down we mean to build what is right and fitted to the times. We harken to the call of the present. We mean to make laws fit conditions as they are and meet the needs of the people who are on earth to-day. That we may do this we found a party through which all who believe with us can work with us."

The speaker discussed the Republican and Democratic Parties, the "boss system," and "special interests," saying:

"At the present moment notorious bosses are in the saddle of both old parties in various important States which must be carried to elect a President. Neither of the old parties' nominees for President can escape obligation to these old party bosses nor shake their practical hold on many and powerful members of the National Legislature.

"Under this boss system, no matter which party wins, the people seldom win; but the bosses almost always win. And they never work for the people. They do not even work for the party to which they belong. They work only for those antipublic interests whose political employes they are. It is these interests that are the real victors in the end.

"These special interests which suck the people's substance are bipartisan. They use both parties. They are the invisible government behind our visible government. Democratic and Republican bosses alike are brother officers of this hidden power. No matter how fiercely they pretend to fight one another before election, they work together after election. And, acting so, this political conspiracy is able to delay, mutilate, or defeat sound and needed laws for the people's welfare and the prosperity of honest business and even to enact bad laws, hurtful to the people's welfare and oppressive to honest business.

"It is this invisible government which is the real danger to American institutions. Its crude work at Chicago in June, which the people were able to see, was no more wicked than its skillful work everywhere and always which the people are not able to see.

"The people are tired of this mock battle with criminal capital. They do not want to hurt business, but they do want to get something done about the trust question that amounts to something. What good does it do any man to read in his morning paper that the courts have "dissolved" the Oil Trust, and then read in his evening paper that he must thereafter pay a higher price for his oil than ever before? What good does it do the laborer who smokes his pipe to be told that the courts have "dissolved" the Tobacco Trust and yet find that he must pay the same or a higher price for the same short-weight package of tobacco? Yet all this is the practical result of the suits against these two greatest trust in the world.

"Such business chaos and legal paradoxes as American business suffers from can be found nowhere else in the world. Rival nations do not fasten legal ball and chain upon their business—no, they put wings on its flying feet. Rival nations do not tell their business men that if they go forward with legitimate enterprise the penitentiary may be their goal. No! Rival nations tell their business men that so long as they do honest business their Governments will not hinder but will help them.

Plea to Southern Democrats.

"The South has men and women as genuinely progressive and others as genuinely reactionary as those in other parts of our country. Yet, for well-known reasons, these sincere and honest Southern Progressives and reactionaries vote together in a single party, which is neither Progressive nor reactionary. They vote a dead tradition and a local fear, not a living conviction and a National faith. They vote not for the Democratic Party, but against the Republican Party. They want to be free from this condition; they can be free from it through the National Progressive Party."

"The root of the wrongs which hurt the people is the fact that the people's government has been taken away from them. Their government must be given back to the people. And so the first purpose of the Progressive Party is to make sure the rule of the people. The rule of the people means that the people themselves shall nominate, as well as elect, all candidates for office, including Senators and Presidents of the United States.

Mr. Beveridge said American business is uncertain and unsteady compared with the business of other nations. "What, then," he asked, "must we do to make American business better? We must do what poorer nations have done. We must end the abuses of business by striking down those abuses instead of striking down business itself."

Urges Tariff Changes.

The speaker declared the Progressive Party will accomplish reforms vital to American business.

"We mean to put new business laws on our statute books which will tell American business men what they can do and what they cannot do. The next great business reform we must have to steadily increase American prosperity is to change the method of building our tariffs. The tariff must be taken out of politics and treated as a business question instead of political question.

"The greatest need of business is certainty, but the only thing certain about our tariff is uncertainty. Next to our need to make the Sherman law modern, understandable, and just, our greatest fiscal need is a genuine, permanent, nonpartisan Tariff Commission. There has not been and will not be any sincere and honest effort by the old parties to get a tariff commission, nor to take the tariff out of politics.

"A tariff high enough to give American producers the American market when they make honest goods and sell them at honest prices, but low enough so that when they sell dishonest goods at dishonest prices foreign competition can correct both evils; a tariff high enough to enable American producers to pay our workingmen American wages, a business tariff where changes will be so made as to reassure business instead of disturbing it—this is the tariff and the method of its making in which the Progressive Party believes, for which it does battle, and which it proposes to write into the laws of the land.

"Who has forgotten the tariff scandals that made President Cleveland denounce the Wilson-Gorman bill as 'a perfidy and a dishonor?' Who can ever forget the brazen robberies forced into the Payne-Aldrich bill which Mr. Taft defended as 'the best ever made?' If every one else forgets these things the interests that profited by them never will forget them. The bosses and the lobbyists that grew rich by putting them through never will forget them. That is why the invisible government and its agents want to keep the old method of tariff building. For, though such tariff 'revisions' may make lean years for the people, they make fat years for the powers of pillage and their agents.

"The Payne-Aldrich tariff laws must be revised immediately in accordance to these principles."

Abolition of child labor in factories, mills, mines, and sweatshops, and a plan for old age pensions were included in the Progressive platform by the speaker, who incidentally favored woman suffrage.

It was practically decided at conferences of the Progressive Party leaders to-night to nominate Gov. Hiram Johnson of California as Col. Roosevelt's running mate on the National ticket. Roosevelt at first held out for the selection of a Southern Democrat, but he has now given his consent to the plan to name Johnson, it is said.

At a late conference with Col. Roosevelt to-day Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver asked to have his name withdrawn from consideration as Permanent Chairman of the Progressive convention. Col. Roosevelt agreed, and it was said the plan now is to continue former Senator Beveridge as Permanent Chairman.

ROOSEVELT IN HUFF OVER PARTY SNARLS

Finds Only a Small Crowd to Cheer His Arrival and Plenty of Problems to Solve.

WORRIED OVER THE NEGROES

Leaders' Pleas Do Not Budge Him and the Colored Delegates Openly Threaten a Bolt.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Conferences at which he endeavored to smooth over the differences that have arisen because of his stand on the negro question, and discussion of the planks, which he demanded be inserted in the platform of the National Progressive Party, took up all of Colonel Roosevelt's time to-day. At the close he was in no very pleasant frame of mind, but let it be known in the most positive terms that he had "stood by his guns" and had told the dissenters that if the Progressives wanted him as their leader, they must follow out his ideas.

To-night he gave his final sanction to the more important planks of the platform. It is now practically in shape for final adoption, but no action will be taken until Col. Roosevelt makes his "declaration of faith" before the convention at noon to-morrow. On this point he has insisted, taking the stand that no opportunity must be left for criticism by his opponents, and that it must be made evident that his beliefs are really to be carried out in starting the new party.

Col. Roosevelt arrived at 8:55 o'clock this morning, and was met by a reception committee headed by Frank H. Funk, Gubernatorial nominee of the Illinois Progressives, and Col. Chauncey Dewey. The crowd that greeted him at the station numbered not more than 700, and that was the first thing to disturb his complacency. But when a cheer was started, he grabbed off his big campaign hat and waved it in response.

At the Congress Hotel, where Col. Roosevelt is again making his headquarters, another crowd of 1,000 had collected, as announcement had been made that the third party leader would speak.

"I am very glad to be with you in Chicago again," Roosevelt told them, "and this time at the birth of a party and not at the death of a party. I am convinced that the people will not stand for the convention of six weeks ago, for that convention was against their interests.

"Let our opponents make no mistake: the fight is going to be made by the people for themselves and along their own ideas, and by November the ticket nominated six weeks ago will no longer be a factor in the race. The American people must stand against theft and fraud when that theft and fraud is at the expense of the people."

Next Col. Roosevelt made a bitter attack on newspapers which have been opposing him, saying:

"The days of the corrupt political boss and the crooked financier, who stands behind the boss and the newspaper owned by the boss and the financier, are past."

He went on:

"Those of you who would investigate the mortgages of The Record Herald would find out why the channels of information have been choked by the opponents of the people. But we will see that the people learn the truth."

The Colonel was asked later about his reference to The Record Herald, and whether he really said mortgage, as some had understood it.

"I said mortgages," retorted Roosevelt. "I believe I said papers like The Record-Herald. I meant papers that suppress or distort the news. If you hunt up the financial interests behind these papers you will usually find the reason for the suppression of news."

The Colonel was asked if he had granted an interview to any of the negro delegations who were waiting to see him in the lobby of the conference rooms. He said that he had not. Then he was asked if such a conference would be granted.

"I can tell you more about it after I have been asked by them," replied the Colonel testily, and walked away, bringing the interview to an end.

Refuses to Budge on Negroes.

Roosevelt's declaration about the negroes from the Southern States has worried his leaders, who see in it the loss of the negro vote there. The Colonel on his arrival was told that the negroes of the North were joining those from the South in declaring that they would vote for Wilson, Taft, or anybody else who might be running, if discrimination against the race was shown. Col. Roosevelt, however, refused to change the stand he took in his letter to Julian Harris of Georgia.

When questioned about this by reporters, after one of the conferences, he angrily declared that the newspapers had almost without exception misrepresented him.

"I will not say another word on the subject to the representative of any newspaper until that newspaper prints my letter in full," he declared. When told that scores of negroes were threatening to bolt the new party, he replied with another show of anger:

"I have made my statement in my letter. In that letter I made plain what I believe to be the right course to take that leaves no room for doubt."

The negroes excluded from the convention were around the Roosevelt rooms all day, hoping that they would hear that the Colonel would see that they were in the right and "give them a square deal," as they expressed it.

G. B. Ellis, who is a leader among Chicago negroes and was appointed Chargé d'Affaires of Liberia by Roosevelt, appeared while a heated discussion between several Southern negroes was at its height.

He declared that the negroes of the North would also vote for any candidate in preference to Roosevelt if the proposed policy was carried out, and that negro speakers would go on the stump against the Colonel. Some of the Roosevelt leaders tried to argue with him, but no argument prevailed.

"We've been with the Colonel because we expected fair play," said Ellis. "If we don't get it the Colonel don't get our votes."

H. W. Suggs, leader of the negro delegates from Arkansas, added that the same feeling prevailed among the negroes in his State.

S. D. Redmond, Chairman of the negro delegation from Mississippi, was another who declared he would stump the State for Wilson, if the negroes were not given their rights by the Colonel.

Prof. Spingarn Tries a Compromise.

Soon after Col. Roosevelt's arrival Prof. Joel B. Spingarn, formerly of Columbia University; Dr. Alfred Hayes, Professor of Law at Cornell, and Dr. Henry Moskowitz, President of the Downtown Ethical Culture Society, had a conference with the Colonel, in which the situation arising from the Colonel's letter to Julian Harris and the negro contests for convention seats was discussed.

Prof. Spingarn, who is interested in the uplift of the negro, had prepared a resolution, which he showed the Colonel, and which, according to a statement made afterward, the Colonel heartily indorsed. The resolution reads:

> The National Progressive Party recognizes that distinctions of race and class in political life have no place in democracy. Especially does the party realize that a group of 10,000,000 people, who have in a generation changed from a slave to a free labor system, re-established family life, accumulated $1,000,000,000 worth of real property including 10,000,000 acres of land, and reduced their illiteracy from 80 to 30 per cent., deserve and must have justice, opportunity, and a voice in their own government.
> The National Progressive Party, therefore, assures the American of African descent of its deep interest in his welfare, and in the gradual recognition by North and South of the principle that the colored man who has the same qualifications that are held to entitle the white man to political representation shall receive the same treatment.

The New York delegation was in session at the time of the conference, and after Col. Roosevelt had given his sanction to the resolution, Prof. Spingarn hurried to the meeting and offered the resolution for approval.

Some of the delegates held, that as they were gathered not as a delegation, but as an adjourned session of the New York Convention, the resolution was out of order.

Oscar S. Straus moved that the motion be tabled on the ground that the matter required careful consideration. His motion was carried, 83 to 20.

Members of the New York delegation who believe the question should be faced frankly, are circulating a petition for a new meeting to-morrow, when they intend to take up the resolution again.

Gov. Johnson was one of the first to go into conference with Col. Roosevelt after his arrival. "Bill" Flinn of Pittsburgh was one of the notable absentees from the conferences, and if he did see the Colonel no one seemed certain of it. This led to reports that Flinn and Roosevelt were not in accord over the situation in Pennsylvania.

It was learned late to-night, however, that the Pennsylvania delegation will appoint a committee of five to consult with Col. Roosevelt on the situation in that State. It has practically been settled, it is said, that the plan of ex-Senator Flinn to have the same Electors on the Republican and Progressive tickets will be abandoned and that there will be three separate tickets of Electors.

Among those who talked things over with the Colonel before the convention opened were George W. Perkins, James R. Garfield, George L. Record of New Jersey, Medill McCormick, Gifford Pinchot, and Charles M. Thompson of Vermont.

PLATFORM MAKERS DISAGREE.

First Draft Sharply Criticised—Will Consult with Roosevelt.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—The Committee on Platform of the National Progressive Convention got into a lively row soon after organization was perfected to-night, and some pretty plain words were spoken in discussing the proposed declaration of principle of the new party.

It was apparent from the first that the platform probably could not be completed before late Tuesday night or Wednesday morning. It is due to go to the convention on Wednesday afternoon.

After full discussion in the General Committee, the plan of the leaders to-night was to appoint a sub-committee of seven to confer with Col. Roosevelt and to work out the platform with him.

The idea will be to condense into crisp, short planks, the various advanced ideas to be outlined to the convention to-morrow by the Colonel in his so-called "Confession of faith" speech. It was said to-night that practically all of the progressiveness in Col. Roosevelt's speech will be adopted in the platform.

There are two or three of the more radical ideas, however, which may not be included. Col. Roosevelt it was said, would not object to the elimination of a few proposals, but is insistent that all the rest shall be contained in the platform, upon which he is to run.

Soon after the committee met to-night the draft of a tentative platform was presented by a group of leaders in the new movement who had met several times to discuss the matter. The draft combined the ideas of Dean Lewis of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, Dean Kirchwey of the Law School of Columbia University, Gifford Pinchot, Chester Rowell of California, Charles McCarthy of the legislative reference bureau at the University of Wisconsin, Medill McCormick of Chicago, James R. Garfield of Ohio, and other close personal friends of Col. Roosevelt.

It had been announced that these men had drafted a scholarly platform which was a programme of genuine social and industrial justice, and which would mark a new era in this connection in the United States.

It required an hour and a half to read this tentative platform, and immediately a dozen members of the committee attacked it with vigor. William Dudley Foulke of Indiana headed the assault. He declared that the platform should be shortened to one-quarter its length.

Hugh T. Halbert of Minnesota took the floor as Foulke had finished his criticism. He called the platform verbose, pedagogic, and lacking in vitality.

"This platform as presented here," said Mr. Halbert, "does not even note the birth of the new party. It seems to me that this fact should be set forth in terse, energetic fashion.

"Furthermore, this document makes violent attack upon the Aldrich currency plan without offering the slightest remedy. A reasonable currency plan, the question of the high cost of living, and some adequate method of handling the trusts are vital points and should be set forth above all else."

The Committee on Resolutions which will submit the platform to the National Progressive Convention was named to-day by the various State delegations as follows:

W. R. Fairley, Alabama; Dwight B. Heard, Arizona; A. Fowler, Arkansas; Chester. H. Rowell, California; Isaac N. Stevens, Colorado; Herbert Knox Smith, Connecticut; George B. Hynson, Delaware; George W. Brown, Georgia; J. M. Ingersoll, Idaho; Charles E. Merriam, Illinois; William D. Foulke, Indiana; James A. Smith, Iowa; William Allen White, Kansas; A. D. Cole, Kentucky; John M. Parker, Louisiana; John E. Taylor, Maine; Miss Alice Carpenter, Massachusetts; Charles A. Schrim, Maryland; Sybrant Wesselus, Michigan; Hugh T. Halbert, Minnesota; A. D. Merton, Missouri; J. H. Cook, Mississippi; Joseph M. Dixon, Montana; Arthur G. Wray, Nebraska; S. Summerfield, Nevada; Daniel C. Remich, New Hampshire; George L. Record, New Jersey; M. E. De Baca, New Mexico; George W. Kirchwey, New York; William S. Pearson, North Carolina; Sivor Serumgard, North Dakota; King G. Thompson, Ohio; John G. Ralls, Oklahoma; J. F. Hughes, Oregon; William Draper Lewis, Pennsylvania; Lucius F. C. Garvin, Rhode Island; E. L. Senn, South Dakota; John C. Hook, Tennessee; J. M. McCormick, Texas; Joseph L. Lewisohn, Utah; Frank F. Howard, Vermont; Wheeler P. Bloodgood, Wisconsin; Joseph McCarey, Wyoming; Gordon C. Corbaley, Washington; Andrew J. Stone, West Virginia.

Miss Alice G. Carpenter of Boston, named by the Massachusetts delegation as a member of the Committee on Platform, is said to be the first woman to fill such a place at a National political convention. Miss Carpenter has been active as a sociological worker and also as a writer.

The committee heard everyone who appeared with an idea until nearly midnight.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, was among those who appeared. She lifted her voice on behalf of the negroes and warned the new party to "stop, look, and listen" before disfranchising in their convention the negroes of the South.

Planks were proposed on civil service reform, prohibition, and nearly every advanced political idea of the day and the committee adjourned its public session shortly before midnight to consider the platform in executive session.

NEW YORKERS STAND FOR FREE JUDICIARY

Delegates Refuse to Demand Third-Party Candidates for the Bench.

OSCAR STRAUS LEADS FIGHT

Buffalo Convention Plank Changed So as to Permit Indorsement of Independent Judiciary.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Contrary to the views expressed by Col. Roosevelt himself and by William H. Hotchkiss, Provisional Chairman of the Colonel's New York State organization, the New York State delegation to the National Progressive Convention, at a meeting held here to-day, blocked a scheme to prevent the third party from aiding a non-partisan programme in the selection of candidates for two vacant places on the Court of Appeals bench which are to be filled in the elections this Fall.

When the district delegates to the National Convention, who under the rules of the new party were to constitute its first State Convention, met as such in Buffalo, en route for Chicago, last Saturday, a resolution was adopted declaring for absolute independence of all other parties in the nomination of candidates. A committee of five was appointed on that occasion for the purpose of framing the policy of the new party with reference to the indorsement of candidates nominated by the old parties or fusion with them.

In the resolution adopted in Buffalo there was no distinction made between candidates for judiciary, legislative, or executive offices. The same policy was to cover all. When former Appraiser Francis W. Bird, who was appointed Chairman of the committee, made his report to the New York State delegation, which, pursuant to adjournment in Buffalo, met here to-day as a second session of the State Convention, the resolution accompanying it was framed so as to make such a distinction. The resolution follows:

> Resolved, That no person shall be nominated for legislative or executive office by the National Progressive Party of the State of New York who is not a regularly enrolled member of such party, and who has not declared his intention to support generally the platform and the candidates of the party.
>
> That no indorsement of any candidate of any other political party for legislative or executive office shall be made by the National Progressive Party of the State of New York.
>
> That all nominations for legislative or executive office shall be made as soon as possible, and should be made before the nominations of the other political parties.
>
> That the National Progressive Party, Incorporated, have full power in the premises.

The fight was on the moment the resolution had been read by Mrs. William Grant Brown, who acted as Secretary of the delegation.

"We have organized not as a sort of side show to the old and corrupt parties, but as a distinct third party forever," said Mr. Bird regarding the adoption of his resolution. "The only manner in which we can preserve this new party pure is by nominating only men who are absolutely committed to our policies and our principles. Already there are indications, especially in certain districts in lower Manhattan, that the old guard is 'planting' its emissaries in the Progressive ranks in order to obtain through them the indorsement of their local candidates as well as their candidates for the Legislature."

Edward Curran, a delegate from Kings, and President of the Kings County Bar Association, at once offered an amendment through which the resolution would cover candidates for the judiciary as well. Jacob L. Holtzmann, one of the delegates from Kings, offered a substitute to the amendment providing that the question of indorsing candidates of the old parties for judiciary offices be left to the local county organization, but with the mandate from the State organization that it was its view that only Progressives should be nominated for the bench.

A protracted debate ensued. Prof. Alfred Hayes, Jr., of Cornell University declared that he thought all candidates for the judiciary should be made to take the Bull Moose pledge, because, in a sense, Judges created legislation.

"We ought to make sure where they stand," said the Professor.

Oscar S. Straus said he was opposed to the amendment because a non-partisan judiciary clearly ought to enter into the Progressive programme.

Robert P. Levisall, one of the delegates from the Nineteenth Congressional District, also spoke in opposition.

Ex-Judge William Watson of Kings spoke in favor of the Curran amendment. Bainbridge Colby, who has been one of the Colonel's standbys in the fight he made for the Republican nomination, and who is a delegate to the Bull Moose Convention, replied by declaring that he would not aid in making any candidate for the judiciary subscribe to partisan pledges.

Both the amendments were beaten by a vote of 82 to 23. The original resolution was then adopted by a viva voce vote which indicated an overwhelming majority in favor of it in its original form.

SOCIAL REFORM TO THE FORE.

London Times Sees Momentous Issues Raised in American Politics.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 6.—The Times in an editorial on the Chicago Convention says:

"Whatever may be the future of the Bull Moose Party and its leader, they have raised the problem of social reform as it has never yet been raised in the United States.

"Nobody who has watched American movements, however superficially, can have failed to observe the progressive growth of discontent in large sections of the population during the last generation. Some of it is probably justified, some of it is not.

"It springs from many causes, and the task of devising and applying remedies to such of them as can and ought to be remedied may well tax the statesmanship of the Nation and their rulers.

"But the 'acceptance' speech of President Taft, no less than the speeches and writings of Roosevelt and the platform of the Democrats, shows that in the judgment of the shrewdest and most experienced politicians of all parties it can no longer be ignored.

"Clearly social reform has come within the domain of practical politics in the Republic, and on the manner and spirit of its treatment there great issues hang, not only for America, but for all civilized peoples."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE BY STATES.

Roosevelt Says He Favors It and Asks Women to Join Party.

William H. Hotchkiss, Provisional Chairman of the Progressive Party of New York State, started for Chicago last night. Before going he gave out a letter from Col. Roosevelt in which the Colonel sets forth his position on woman suffrage. The Colonel says he favors granting the suffrage to women by States, and he adds that the women should make their fight from within his party. This is the letter:

July 30, 1912.

To the State and County Chairmen of the National Progressive Party.

Gentlemen: I favor woman suffrage by States; that many of the State leaders in the National Progressive Party movement take the same view is shown both by the planks in various Progressive State platforms and by the fact that even in the non-suffrage States women have been elected as delegates to the National Convention.

The suffrage organizations have never been given representation in any party, and have sought to gain their rights outside of party lines. In a number of States the experiment of woman suffrage has now been tried; in actual practice it has been found to work well. The Progressive Party as a whole undoubtedly believes in it. We do not attempt to dictate what any State should do in this matter, for we know that the needs and the feelings of the States vary; but we do cordially commend the matter to the well-thought-out judgment of the people of each State—both the men and the women.

Women should make the fight within the Progressive Party. They should help in founding a party which will represent the whole people in their fight for social justice. One chief feature in that fight is the protection of working women and children in their struggle for fair hours, for decent wages, and for living conditions, which will make vice and poverty unnecessary.

I therefore hope that whenever it is possible we shall see women delegates to the National Convention, and women members of the State and County Committees.

I believe that the women members of such committees would constitute very valuable Campaign Committees. I do not desire in any way to interfere in the conduct of our campaign, but I venture respectfully to suggest that you take this matter under advisement and, so far as possible, get the women to aid the men in this great struggle to put on a higher plane, morally and materially, the conditions of life and labor for both men and women. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Chairman Hotchkiss will arrive in Chicago in time to take part in to-day's session of the convention.

PATROL CATSKILL ROADS.

Special to The New York Times.

TANNERSVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Detectives who had been stationed at this place and in nearby towns to watch boarding houses where "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" were believed to be in hiding spent most of their time to-day guarding the roads connecting Tannersville with surrounding villages. The rumor flew across the country early in the morning that the hunted men had left their hiding place and taken to the open country for refuge. The wilderness of thick brush which clothes the steep sides of the Catskills makes escape impossible except by the main roads.

One Headquarters detective kept the road covered in an automobile between Phoenicia and Tannersville. Grocery stores in the vicinity of Tannersville were visited yesterday by detectives to discover whether the fugitives had bought provisions. A search was made by detectives in the neighborhood of Onteora Park, near Tannersville, in which the Summer homes of Maude Adams, Carroll Beckwith, the portrait painter, and other noted persons are situated.

Inspector Hughes was reported yesterday to have returned temporarily to New York, but it was stated that there is no intention of abandoning the siege of Catskill boarding houses near Tannersville and Fleischmanns.

Countryside in Fear of Assassins.

Many villagers assert that they have seen and conversed with "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie." Dozens of men answering to the general description of the fugitives have been shadowed by Headquarters detectives and Summer boarders with a fancy for sleuthing. Every little boarding house has a suspect of its own, and fear of the assassins has been deeply implanted in the town. The name of "Gyp the Blood" makes him the terror of the countryside.

The belief that the pair are in the neighborhood has been more effective than the curfew in keeping people home after nightfall. Ernest Byck, proprietor of the only moving picture house in Tannersville, said yesterday that business in the evening had fallen off nearly 50 per cent. since the man hunt centred at Tannersville.

Deputy Sheriff M. Lackey, Jr., says he has confidential advice that the fugitives are hidden in a cave at Big Hollow, ten miles south of here. Deputy Lackey has a countrywide reputation as a wit, and has put in a good deal of spare time inventing detective stories and trying to get them published. Last night Deputy Lackey caused a mild sensation for a few minutes with the aid of a coffee drummer from Albany named S. J. Speir, who posed as an Albany detective and told an exciting story of nearly capturing "Gyp the Blood" at Grand Hotel.

Speir gave an excellent description of gambling houses conducted there in the Summer by Curly Dunn, a well-known New York gambler, but he had to admit later that he carried no handcuffs, weapons, nor detective's badge. He made the plea that Deputy Sheriff Lackey had put him up to pose as a sleuth.

Suspects Seen Near Auburn.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 5.—That the Auburn police are continuing to seek the Rosenthal suspects near here, despite denials, became known to-day when it was learned that three detectives arrived too late at Island Park, an Owasco Lake resort, yesterday afternoon, on a telephone tip that two young men answering the published descriptions of "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood" were there.

E. J. McDermott, a New York stage electrician, who conducts a lunch stand here in Summer, sold the pair "hot dogs," which one paid for from a roll of bills. They identified McDermott as a New Yorker from his manner of speaking, and discussed the Rosenthal case with him, one, whom McDermott believes was Horowitz, saying:

"It is a shame the way they are going after them guys. Becker hired them, and he ought to be the one to get it."

On learning that a "Rube" constable was on the grounds, they disappeared.

Mrs. Martin Torsney, a boarding-house keeper of Auburn, declared positively to-day the original of a published picture of Sam Schepps left her boarding house on Saturday after staying there two days.

LEVY'S SEARCH INDEPENDENT.

Not Looking for Assassins, but for Witnesses for His Clients.

An independent search for missing suspects in the Rosenthal murder is being made by private detectives on behalf of Libby and Shapiro, owners and operators of the car in which the assassins rode to the Metropole Hotel, the cost of which, it is said, is being paid by friends of the two men.

Aaron J. Levy, attorney for Libby and Shapiro, who has been directing this search in Worcester, Mass., said last night on his return from that place that the search was being made for "certain culprits" whose names have not figured in the case publicly, but who were concerned in the murder. Their apprehension is desired to establish the story told by his clients to the District Attorney. He declined to give the names of the men wanted, and added that he did not know whether District Attorney Whitman knew them or not.

In this connection Attorney Levy said that two reliable persons in Worcester had described the appearance there of a red automobile bearing a New York number shortly after "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" were seen at Revere Beach, and the car was supposed to have something to do with the movements of these two suspects, for whom the police have been hunting in the Catskills.

BECKER BACKERS CLASH ON COUNSEL

case. It was said, although nobody could cite the authority for it, that Mr. Hart, who was an assistant of Mr. Jerome when the latter was District Attorney, was the man who was urging Becker to retain his former chief.

As to Mr. Jerome, it can be stated, and on the authority of one who talked with him recently, that he has no desire to resume the practice of criminal law and that it is doubtful if he will accept the case if it is tendered to him.

Whitman's Former Aids for Defense.

These are not the only lawyers whose names were brought into the Becker case yesterday. When Becker was arraigned before Judge Mulqueen it was noted that among the company of ex-Assistant District Attorneys that appeared for Becker were three who were all members of Mr. Whitman's staff earlier in his administration. These three were John W. Hart, George W. Whiteside, and Lloyd P. Stryker, who succeeded Whiteside as head of the Special Sessions Bureau, and later had charge of the Gerry society cases and the loan shark prosecutions. Whiteside and Stryker are partners now at 27 William Street. It was not known until the court proceedings yesterday that they had been called into the case by Hart, who was retained by Becker before the murder was committed and when the only charge against the Lieutenant was the one made by Rosenthal in a newspaper.

Becker appeared in two courts yesterday, the appearance being his first since his commitment to the Tombs, a week ago last night. Imprisonment does not appear to have had any effect upon him. He was calm, smiling, and apparently confident as he crossed the threshold of the courtroom.

Becker Called Before Crain.

Becker's case was called at 10:30 o'clock before Judge Crain in the Court of General Sessions. Assistant District Attorney Deming, who was in the courtroom at the time, jumped to his feet and told Judge Crain that there must be some mistake in the day. He was told by the Clerk that the case had been put over a week on July 29, and that this would bring the case up on Monday. Mr. Deming asked that a few minutes be given him, and he went to a telephone, calling up the District Attorney's office, asking for Assistant District Attorney Moss, who has been aiding District Attorney Whitman in preparing the case. Mr. Moss was not in the office, but Assistant District Attorney Smith went at once to the courtroom and asked that the case be set over for a short time. Judge Crain placed the time on the case at 11:30 o'clock, and was ready to take up another case, when Mr. Whitman walked into the room.

The matter was explained to him, and after talking with Mr. Smith, he went to his office. Mr. Whitman arrived back at the Criminal Court Building shortly before 11 o'clock.

Shortly before noon Mr. Whitman entered the inclosure before the bar in Part I., General Sessions. Judge Crain immediately asked him if he and John W. Hart, counsel for Becker, were ready to go on. Mr. Hart, who had stepped inside the rail with George W. Whiteside, Robert Elder and Lloyd Stryker, as assistant counsel, asked:

"Does your honor desire to see me or proceed with the case?"

"You may make any motion you desire," the court replied.

"If the court pleases," Mr. Hart then said, "an indictment was returned and filed in this court a week ago, charging Charles Becker with murder in the first degree. He was brought to court and entered a plea of not guilty. On the back of the indictment it was stated that he might change the plea in a week."

In the meantime Becker had been brought into court, but was not seen by Mr. Hart. Mr. Hart, still talking to the court, said:

"I ask that he be brought into court."

The lawyer's attention was then called to the fact that Becker was standing behind him. Mr. Hart then continued:

"We withdraw the plea of not guilty heretofore entered. The plea is withdrawn."

Judge Crain turned to Mr. Whitman and asked if there was any objection to the withdrawal of the plea.

"There is no objection to the withdrawal of the plea of not guilty," Mr. Whitman answered.

Mr. Hart turned to Mr. Stryker, who had copies of several legal papers in his hand, and said to the court:

"I serve the District Attorney with two copies of motion papers in this case."

"I ask that the defendant be made to plead before the motion papers are entered," Mr. Whitman interposed.

Refers Motion Papers to Mulqueen.

Mr. Whitman then urged that the case had originally been brought before Judge Mulqueen, and that any motion should be made before him, to which Judge Crain answered:

"The matter should be referred to him."

"The papers have not been served on the District Attorney," interrupted Mr. Hart. "I want to serve them now."

After Judge Crain had ordered the matter referred to Judge Mulqueen Mr. Whiteside handed the copies of the motion to Mr. Whitman.

"I desire to file the papers with the Clerk of the Court," said Mr. Hart.

"This matter has received some attention from Judge Mulqueen," replied the court, "and it is referred to him."

"I don't understand," said Mr. Hart, "to what term of the court I am referred."

"To Part I., Continued, which is presided over by Judge Mulqueen."

"I take exception to your Honor's order."

"That order stands."

"May I have your Honor's permission to have the defendant's brother talk to him at the rail?"

The Court consented, and Lieut. John Becker, the defendant's brother, went to the rail and talked with the defendant during the rest of the proceedings.

"I now wish to file with the Clerk originals of the motions just served on the District Attorney," said Mr. Hart.

Mr. Whitman smiled, and remarked:

"I will not dispute that I have received copies of the original."

"May I say a word?" asked Mr. Hart, leaning forward.

"You may say anything you want," said Judge Crain, "but the Court will not rule on the matter. Call the next case for pleading."

Becker was then led back through the pen, and Mr. Hart and his assistants left the room for Judge Mulqueen's court.

Rush to Get Into Court.

As Mr. Hart turned into Judge Mulqueen's courtroom the crowd which had surrounded Judge Crain's court made a rush forward, and several succeeded in getting inside before the court attendants were able to get the doors closed. After that no one was admitted except the newspaper men.

Judge Mulqueen had a case about to start before him, but he sidetracked that and immediately the Clerk called the case against Becker.

There was some delay in bringing the prisoner into court, and when he appeared he had lost the smile he had displayed as he entered Judge Crain's courtroom.

Mr. Hart lost no time in opening his case. As Becker took his place at the railing, Mr. Hart said:

"I have filed two motions with the Clerk of this court which could not be filed until his pleading of not guilty was withdrawn. The time set for the withdrawal of the pleading was for to-day, and I now wish to state that as the law provides that two days' notice must be given for argument on motions, the earliest date at which they can be heard would be Wednesday. If the District Attorney wishes to waive that notice, I am willing to argue them earlier."

Judge Mulqueen then asked what the motions were.

Mr. Hart said that the first was to dismiss the indictment, on the ground that it was illegally found, and the second was a motion for an inspection of the Grand Jury minutes and an order requiring the District Attorney to indorse the names of the witnesses on the back of the indictment, as required by law.

"The moving papers set forth that the session of the Grand Jury at which this indictment was returned was not legally convened and that seven members of the Grand Jury were not even summoned," continued Mr. Hart.

"The Grand Jury meets when and where it pleases," said Judge Mulqueen. "It met at my orders, and as long as there were sixteen present and twelve voted for the indictment, the indictment is legal. I dismiss the motion on these grounds."

"Then I will stand on the ground stated in my written motion," said Mr. Hart.

Judge Mulqueen examined the copy of the motion which had been put before him, and after some time asked:

"Are there any other grounds stated in here than that?"

Mr. Hart said that the indictment was not properly indorsed on the back, and Judge Mulqueen said that there were some names of witnesses on the back and handed the indictment to the District Attorney.

District Attorney Whitman looked at the copy of the indictment and placed it back on the Judge's desk with a smile, but did not make any remark.

"I ask also that the court order the taking of testimony from the District Attorney, his assistants, his clerks, the officers of the Grand Jury, and others," said Mr. Hart, "in order to sustain the contention of the illegal aspect of this indictment."

Judge Mulqueen turned to District Attorney Whitman and asked him if he had anything to say. Mr. Whitman said:

"The court is acquainted with all the facts surrounding the return of this indictment. It seems needless for me to say anything in support of its legality."

Tilt Between Judge and Hart.

There was a long pause, as if some ruling was expected on the question, but when Judge Mulqueen said nothing Mr. Hart said:

"Will your Honor set a time for the argument on these motions?"

"Does the attorney wish to submit a brief?" asked Judge Mulqueen.

"Why, no," said Mr. Hart, evidently surprised. "I simply wished for time to prepare my oral argument."

"I understood that you were prepared to argue this morning," said Judge Mulqueen.

"Why, no, Sir," said Mr. Hart, "I would require but a short time, however, to prepare my argument."

Judge Mulqueen was plainly angered.

"There is nothing before this court," he snapped. "These motions are marked returnable Aug. 7."

"I wish to move—," said Mr. Hart, when he was interrupted by Judge Mulqueen, who said:

"Any motions you wish to make will be in writing and supported by affidavits in the proper way."

"But, your Honor, it is a motion for testimony which I will want to use on a hearing of the argument on the motion to dismiss the indictment."

"You know the proper method of making the motion," said Judge Mulqueen.

"I move that the Clerk of the court be instructed to produce the tally sheets showing the attendance of the Grand Jurymen for the month of July, during the time these proceedings against Charles Becker were pending."

Judge Mulqueen looked at Mr. Hart quietly for a moment, and then he said very slowly and distinctly:

"There is nothing before this court."

"Then, I understand my motion is denied?" queried Mr. Hart.

"You understand nothing," almost shouted Judge Mulqueen, "there is nothing before this court."

Then again slowly and distinctly resumed the Judge:

"Any motion the counsel wishes to make will be made in writing."

Mr. Hart attempted to say something, but Judge Mulqueen went on:

"The arguments on the two motions before this court will be heard on Aug. 7. Prisoner remanded until that time."

As Becker was led back to the prison pen four or five of his friends who had managed to get into court greeted him, but although he returned their greetings with a curt nod of his head, he seemed to be thinking of something different from his friends. He appeared a deal more worried than when he entered the courtroom.

Crowd Waited for Rose.

The arraignment of Becker caused a big crowd to gather in front of the Criminal Court Building. In Lafayette and Centre Streets hundreds packed the sidewalks and watched the Bridge of Sighs, hoping to catch a glimpse of Becker as he passed on his way to and from court.

The understanding that Jack Rose, the gambler whose confession named Becker as the instigator of the Rosenthal murder, was to be arraigned for examination before Coroner Feinberg at 2 P. M., caused another and larger crowd to gather in Lafayette Street in the afternoon, But the afternoon crowd went away disappointed, for the bold-headed gambler was not arraigned.

Cowering with fear in his cell in the West Side Prison, Rose pleaded that he be not exposed to the wrath of the gangsters who formerly had been his friends. He said he was convinced that an effort would be made to kill him to keep him from testifying in court to the details of the plot which he had laid bare.

"I have never seen such a change in any man," said Morris Rose, a brother of Jack Rose, yesterday. "He is in a state of nervous collapse. He can't eat, he can't sleep, and all he can think about is the murder. I tried to cheer him up to-day by talking about his family to him, but he sat there in his cell with his head in his hands, brooding over the crime and the part he was terrorized into taking in it. His condition is pitiful, and he firmly believes that his enemies will get to him if he is taken out of the prison."

James M. Sullivan, counsel for Rose, conferred with Mr. Whitman concerning his client's condition yesterday morning, and it was agreed to postpone the examination until Aug. 19.

The crowd outside the court was told about the postponement, but few believed it, and many remained there waiting for Rose to appear until after 5 o'clock.

A squad of police reserves under Lieut. Bennett of the Elizabeth Street Station was on duty in and around the Criminal Court Building all day to prevent any disorder.

Webber Warned Again.

"Bridgey" Webber and Harry Vallon, the other two gamblers who have confessed their part in the Rosenthal conspiracy, are also in great fear of their lives. They say they expect to be killed if taken through the streets to the court. Webber yesterday received the following letter, which is a sample of the kind he and his fellow informers are getting in every mail:

> Aug. 2, 12 Midnight.
>
> Mr. Webber: In case you have an interest to live a few years more it would be advisable for you to keep your mouth shut. Don't do like Rose, as he is on our death list, with Assistant District Attorney Moss. Whether he leaves prison or not he dies before the month is over. You understand he involves high officials, and they will not stand for exposure. The less you say the more you live.
>
> THE CROWD.

It is understood at the District Attorney's office that subpoenas have been issued for the appearance before the Grand Jury of Harry Pollok and his wife. Pollok, who is a promoter of sporting features, will be asked to explain why he harbored Jack Rose in his home when he had reason to know that the police were looking for the gambler in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Mrs. Pollok will be questioned along the same lines.

Say These Men Failed to Arrest.

Policemen Michael J. Philbin and James A. McMahon of the new Lenox Avenue Police Station were called before the District Attorney yesterday afternoon to explain why they had declined to investigate two men who had been pointed out to them by a civilian as "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz and Sam Schepps, two of the missing suspects in the Rosenthal case. The alleged suspects, it was said, were seen near Lenox Avenue and 143d Street last Saturday night.

A man who told Mr. Whitman that he knew both "Gyp the Blood" and Schepps said that one of the policemen was on stationary post and the other on patrol. The man on stationary duty refused to investigate, giving as an excuse that he had recently been fined fifteen days' pay for leaving his post, and did not intend to run the chances of another such fine. The other policeman, who was on patrol, said he did not care to mix up in the Rosenthal case.

The policemen were questioned by Assistant District Attorney Moss, but their excuses for not investigating the alleged suspects were not made public. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty came in while the policemen were being questioned, and in answer to a question said that if a citizen had pointed out two men as being Rosenthal suspects it was the duty of the policemen to investigate, no matter the nature of the duty they were performing at the time.

TELLS OF SAM PAUL RAIDS.

Waldo Says Courts Won't Convict—Swann Says Witnesses "Forget."

Commissioner Waldo gave out another statement yesterday that was devoted entirely to the police and court record of Sam Paul, the gambler, who, he said, had been arrested thirteen times within ten and a half months.

The record was interesting because it showed that in all of the thirteen raids made on places alleged to have been run by Paul at 29 Cooper Square, 134 and 136 East Thirteenth Street, 103 Fourth Avenue, and 218 East Fourteenth Street the harvest was a total of sixty-three prisoners. Of these, 44 were discharged in the courts, 10 were fined $50 each, and the cases of 9 are still pending. In a raid made on April 11, 1912, the three prisoners were charged with violation of Section 986 of the Penal Code. One of the three was discharged by Magistrate Russell and two were fined $50 each. Section 986 relates to poolselling, bookmaking, and so forth, and fixes punishment upon conviction at "imprisonment in a penitentiary or county jail for a period of not more than one year." It makes no mention of a fine.

The Commissioner was mainly concerned in trying to show that the courts were responsible for the present bad condition of the city, so far as gambling is concerned. He was asked what reason the various Judges and Magistrates gave for their manner of disposing of the cases.

Not Evidence Enough, He Is Told.

"They just said that we had not submitted enough evidence," said the Commissioner. "Why, last January I went before the Grand Jury, and one of the members told me that the Grand Jury could not find indictments against certain gamblers unless we proved that the roulette wheel confiscated in a resort had been the one used by the men arrested. Now, what had that to do with it?"

In order to show the difficulty of getting proof enough to satisfy the courts that heavy punishment ought to be inflicted on common gamblers, the Commissioner referred in his statement to a raid made on March 2, 1912, at 3:40 o'clock in the afternoon. The place was run, the Commissioner said, by Sam Paul at 136 East Thirteenth Street. Warrants were got from Magistrate McAdoo on evidence obtained by Detectives Henry C. Jessup and Lawrence J. Beine, members of Special Squad 2. Seventeen arrests were made, and the prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan. Three of the prisoners, who were only accused of acting as doormen, were discharged, and the other fourteen were held for trial. Eight of them were charged with felony and six with misdemeanor.

On April 16, just six weeks after the arrests were made, the two detectives appeared before the Grand Jury, of which Joseph P. Day was foreman. No indictments were found against the eight prisoners charged with felony. But the six charged with misdemeanor were fined $50 each in General Sessions. What section of the penal code these six were charged with violating does not appear in the Commissioner's statement, so it is reasonable to suppose that the section was 970, which limits the punishment to imprisonment for not more than two years, and a fine of not more than $1,000.

Repeats That Courts Give Immunity.

The statement is incomplete in some other particulars also, for it does not furnish any details of the evidence supplied to the courts or the Grand Jury, and in some cases it defaults in telling how long a time elapsed between the arrests and the final disposition of the cases. But the statement does contain the names of Judge Moss and Magistrates Kernochan, O'Connor, Krotel, McQuade, Russell, and House, as among those who displayed leniency in disposing of the gambling cases.

The Commissioner was incited to prepare this record in answer to the criticisms of police evidence made by Judge Swann, and he insists that the immunity enjoyed by notorious gamblers is entirely the fault of the courts where arrested gamblers are arraigned.

Judge Swann of General Sessions and District Attorney Whitman both gave out statements in reply to Commissioner Waldo, and both asserted that failures to convict gamblers were due to the policemen who made the arrests, and not to the Grand Jury or the Judges.

A careful search of the records in Special Sessions for the past four years shows that Sam Paul's name has not appeared in any court during that period, while the record of General Sessions which was submitted by Judge Swann shows that his name has not appeared on any court record since 1910. Judge Swann said:

Judge Swann Disputes Waldo.

"I have no desire to create any friction between the two services, and believe that the courts should work in harmony with Waldo, but he makes a great mistake in attacking the Judges. He says that a member of the Grand Jury told him that, in order to indict, that body must have evidence to show that gambling paraphernalia was actually in use. There is no such rule of law, and, besides, it is very easy for a public officer to get advice from a competent authority rather than from a layman. The Judges and the District Attorney are the legal advisers of the Grand Jury, and they can also have any case reheard before that body. I advised the Grand Jury during the March term, to which one of Waldo's accusations refers, and I do not believe there was ever a more splendid body of men on the Grand Jury than at that time.

"Mr. Waldo comments upon the City Magistrates. It is a curious fact that Sam Paul is, as I am informed, a Republican leader, and it is therefore ridiculous to suppose he could influence the Magistrates, who are, as a rule, Democrats. Furthermore, if a City Magistrate does not hold a gambler, or any other man, Waldo can go to a Judge or to the District Attorney and have the case taken to the Grand Jury if the evidence warrants. It is also a rule of law that either the Judge or the District Attorney can have the Grand Jury reconsider any case where they believe an injustice has been done, and all that the Police Commissioner has to do is to submit facts to warrant such action.

"The reason a plea of guilty is taken is because the Assistant District Attorney comes into court and says: 'The same old thing has happened.' When the case was before the Grand Jury the evidence was sufficient to indict, but between the day of the indictment and the day of the trial the police had managed to 'forget the facts.' We cannot convict as the police 'have forgotten,' and a trial, if held, would result in an acquittal."

Whitman Insists Police Are to Blame

Mr. Whitman said:

"Since I have been District Attorney not a single policeman has asked me to get the Grand Jury to reconsider any gambling case, and there were only two similar cases where I was asked to submit a case to the Grand Jury after a City Magistrate had refused to hold the prisoner. Once one of my assistants asked me to do so, and once a police officer requested that I have the case submitted. In the former case an indictment was found and in the latter the case was thrown out.

"You know the old story. It is older than Waldo. The police prepare the case for the Magistrate's Court in such a fashion that the defendants are held, but when it is presented to the Grand Jury their testimony is much weaker. Where, in the Magistrate's Court, they say they saw the prisoner engaged at the wheel, they say before the Grand Jury that they saw some one there, but that they 'are not sure it was the defendant.'

"It has been said that the police should be prosecuted for pedjury in sich cases. The general public does not know that a contradication in testimony is not necessarily perjury. You must prove that a certain specific statement was sworn to, and that later another statement was sworn to, and that one of them was a lie."

House Assails Waldo.

Magistrate Frederick House, sitting in the Men's Night Court last night, gave the following statment to newspaper men relative to the gambling situation in this city:

"I understand Commissioner Waldo has me under serious indictment. He wants to know what has become of six men who were arrested in Sam Paul's gambling resort and arraigned before me in a day police court.

"I will tell Mr. Waldo that five of the men were held for trial, and one was discharged because the Assistant District Attorney so advised.

"I have no hesitation in saying that the administration of the Police Department, with Gaynor and Waldo at the head, has fallen to pieces.

"I see that Mr. Waldo seems to think that there has been no gambling going on. He either must be a fool or a knave if he thinks so."

Magistrate House was asked if, in his opinion, gambling has been as extensively carried on in the past few months as has been alleged. He replied:

"I have no hesitation in saying there has been more gambling going on under the Administration of Gaynor than we have had in the last twenty-five years."

THESE DETECTIVES WON.

Expense Accounts Show Two Men Who Made Money for City.

It was learned yesterday at the Controller's office that among the vouchers giving lists of expenses incurred by members of the gambling squads in getting evidence were two which showed that two members of the squad had made winnings in playing the horses in poolrooms while gathering evidence. The men were Detectives Hickson and Dungdale, and the amounts won were credited against the expenses.

Chief Auditor Hervey said he would call the attention of Controller Prendergast to these vouchers as soon as the Controller returned. The chief auditor also said that he would suggest that the two men be given special mention for their itemization of expenditures and winnings alike. Other vouchers which have been turned in for expenses have recorded losses, but no winnings.

LEWIS'S BAD ARMY RECORD.

Dishonorably Discharged and Imprisoned for Stabbing Another Soldier.

The complete army record of "Whitey" Lewis reached Police Headquarters late yesterday from Adjt. Gen. Henry P. McCain of the United States Army. It says:

"The man whose finger-print record is returned herewith enlisted in the army at Fort Slocum, N. Y., Oct. 29, 1910, under the name of Frank Seiden. He was tried by a general court-martial at Fort William McKinley, Philippine Islands, for conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline in that he feloniously stabbed another recruit in the shoulder and breast with a knife, with intent to do serious bodily harm. He was found guilty and was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged, with confinement at hard labor for three months. He was dishonorably discharged on March 6, 1911, at Fort William McKinley, Philippine Islands, and was released from confinement on June 2, 1911, at the Pacific Branch, United States Military Prison, San Francisco, Cal., by expiration of sentence."

The Man in the Tower Indulges in a Drop

FROM the balcony of the Tower, where the Summer breezes are blowing, this welcome drop in prices is observed:

$20 Suits now $15.50
25 Suits now 19.50
30 Suits now 23.50
35 Suits now 26.50
40 Suits now 32.50

So he indulges—and sees hundreds of men who would run a mile from an ordinary sale also indulging.

For these suits were the most worth while at their original prices.

To the man who buys clothes to last through a season and lap over into the next this is a subtreasury of opportunities.

These mixtures—blacks, blues, serges and flannels—these English lapels and shoulders—these patch pockets and Norfolks—were made because the men about New York wanted them.

The best dressed men in the community are wearing them now—and will until the frost nips the putting greens.

You can use these suits for several months—and next Spring.

We can't. We have to get rid of them now.

Don't confuse them with the odds and ends—the vagabonds and adventurers in the suit line, that flock to Broadway with the reduction season.

It is simply the regular stock of Weber and Heilbroner—all this season's goods—being cleared out.

And it doesn't take long.

JUDGE SWANN'S ACTS ASSAILED BY LAWYER

Misdemeanor Charge Is Made Against Jurist by Woman's Counsel in Court.

HAD SENTENCED HER TWICE

Removed Woman to Prison from Catholic Sisters Because of Frequent Complaints, Judge Says.

In court yesterday John T. Little, a lawyer, of 42 Broadway, accused Judge Swann of General Sessions of committing a misdemeanor in preventing the appearance before Supreme Court Justice Lehmann of Jennie Sullivan, for whom a writ of habeas corpus had been sworn out.

Jennie Sullivan was arrested in August for stealing $3 from a woman's purse in a New York department store. She was indicted for grand larceny, but decided to plead guilty to petit larceny. Judge Swann sent her to the House of the Good Shepherd. According to her lawyer, it was agreed upon that she was to be detained a few months at the outside. He felt that the two years' term imposed was excessive, in so far as the extreme penalty for petit larceny is one year in the penitentiary.

Because of these facts, Mr. Little swore out a writ of habeas corpus for the woman on July 31. As soon as Judge Swann was advised of this, the lawyer complains, he issued a bench warrant, and ordered the prisoner remanded to the Tombs, and then sentenced her to serve a year in prison.

Yesterday in the Supreme Court Mr. Little declared that Judge Swann has been guilty of violating the code of civil procedure in two instances, first, by punishing the prisoner twice for a single offense, and again by taking her from the House of the Good Shepherd, where a writ of habeas corpus had been issued for her, and remanding her to another place, where the writ was without effect.

The writ was returnable yesterday, and Justice Lehmann dismissed it on the technicality that the prisoner was not where the document alleged she was being detained. Immediately Mr. Little swore out a second writ.

"If I do not succeed in obtaining justice on this writ," the lawyer said, "I shall swear out a warrant in a magistrate's court for the appearance of Judge Swann, who for his misdemeanor is liable to $1,000 fine or six months' imprisonment."

When confronted with the accusations brought against him, Judge Swann laughed and branded them as absurd.

"I never heard of this writ of habeas corpus," said the Judge, "until after I had remanded the prisoner to the Tombs. And the statement that I had sentenced her to the House of the Good Shepherd is untrue. When the woman was arraigned before me, having been indicted for grand larceny, for which she could have been imprisoned for five years, I was going to sentence her at once. But the Catholic Sisters pleaded with me, saying that the woman was repentant and that they would perhaps be able to do something with her. I gave in, simply beacuse she was a woman, and suspended sentence. But things did not go smoothly in the House of the Good Shepherd. I received frequent complaints about the woman. I then issued my bench warrant and imposed the one-year sentence."

Mr. Little declared that Jennie Sullivan, who is 42 years old, was not a woman of criminal record. Judge Swann averred, however, that she had been twice previously arrested for shoplifting.

Exhibit at Vacation School 188.

The exhibits will show the work of classes in cooking, sewing, Venetian iron work, woodwork, and kindergarten courses. The school is attended by more than 1,500 boys and girls. Miss Sarah M. Hatch is the principal.

ALDERMEN START A POLICE INQUIRY

Tammany Members Vote with Republicans for a Sweeping Graft Investigation.

COMMITTEE OF NINE NAMED

$25,000 Inquiry Fund Asked For—Corporation Counsel Watson to Attend Every Session.

An Aldermanic committee consisting of nine members was chosen yesterday to investigate the charges that members of the Police Department have been accepting graft from gamblers and that certain officials were criminally concerned in the murder of Herman Rosenthal. The investigation will probably end in a complete Lexowing of the department from bottom to top.

The committee consists of six Republicans and three Democrats, and is made up of Henry H. Curran, Chairman, and Ralph Folks, Manhattan; Robert F. Downing and O. Grant Esterbrook, Brooklyn; James Hamilton, the Bronx, and W. Augustus Shipley, Queens, Republicans; James J. Smith and Frank L. Dowling, Manhattan, and James P. Kenny, Brooklyn, Democrats. A resolution requesting the Board of Estimate to appropriate $25,000 of special revenue bonds for expenses was also adopted.

There was no opposition from the Tammany members of the board to either resolution. The vote was made unanimous. Inasmuch as Mayor Gaynor had opposed the calling together of the Aldermen it had been expected that the Tammany members would vote against the proposals, but evidently all had seen a light, for Frank L. Dowling, the Tammany minority leader, speaking for the Democrats, said that every member desired a most thorough investigation.

The appointment of counsel for the committee is still to be considered, although Corporation Counsel Watson said that he expected to be present at every session and to have a hand in the examination of witnesses.

The Curran Resolution.

Sixty-four Aldermen were present and fourteen absent. Alderman Curran read his resolution, which stated:

> Resolved, That a special committee of nine members elected to the Board of Aldermen, the first to be Chairman, be appointed, authorized, empowered, and directed to inquire whether the laws and ordinances of the city relating to the Police Department of the City of New York are being faithfully observed, and whether the duties of officers of such department are being faithfully discharged, and to examine and report whether there are any unnecessary, inefficient, or unfit employes of such department; and generally in respect of any and all matters which will conduce to the orderly and economical administration of the affairs of the Police Department; and that, for the purpose and authority possessed by the Board of Aldermen, to conduct such inquiry, including any and all powers that may be conferred upon a committee appointed pursuant to section 54 of the Greater New York Charter.

"There is a law on the statute books against gambling that is not being enforced," said Alderman Curran in support of his resolution. "We do not know as yet who is responsible for this nonenforcement. But two weeks ago or more there was perpetrated in this city an atrocious murder—a murder so planned and carried out as to make it apparent that it was staged to serve as a warning to all city authorities and law-abiding New Yorkers that interference with the business of gambling will not be tolerated—will be opposed even to the extent of murder.

"The work of this committee to be appointed must be done quietly, without notoriety or without any desire to gain credit for the committee. If our house is not in order we must put it in order, and if I had control of the situation I would resign sooner than be responsible for the injection of one word of politics into the situation."

When the resolution appointing the committee was adopted the one requesting the $25,000 was then put to the board.

"We are heartily in favor of appropriating not only $25,000 but $1,000,000 if necessary," said Mr. Dowling, "to uncover and put to an end any alliance between the police and gamblers or other criminals."

Corporation Counsel Watson, who had been sitting quietly in a corner, then got up and said:

"Though not a member of this board I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity of saying a word upon the important business now before you.

"Let me say in the first place that I earnestly hope, as must you, Mr. President, and as must every man worthy to be a member of this board, that the coming inquiry will be full and thorough, conducted without fear or favor in any direction or from any source.

"The burden that you assume is a heavy one. Let it not be underestimated at this time.

"Nor do I desire, nor have I ever desired or expected—and I say this that my personal attitude may not be misunderstood—to assume the full burden and responsibility of the legal work that is done in connection with this inquiry. What I do wish, and what I shall, if necessary, insist upon, is that I shall be present in person or by representative at all times when witnesses are examined or testimony is taken; that in person or by representative I may ask any witness who may be introduced here such other and additional questions as may seem to me to be proper and necessary to bring out the facts; and further, that this committee will subpoena or hear any witness or witnesses in addition to others already heard, whose testimony may seem to me necessary fully to bring out all of the facts and circumstances surrounding this important situation."

Chairman Curran said later that the committee would probably hold its first meeting next Monday.

NEW GRAND JURIES SWORN.

Whitman Orders Assistants to Clear Up Accumulated Cases.

Judge Crain, sitting in Part I. of General Sessions yesterday, charged the two Grand Juries of which he has direction this month. One jury will consider the Rosenthal case, both the murder and the charges brought against Becker by Rosenthal. The other will handle the routine business of the month. The present Grand Jury is held over from last month.

Judge Crain made no direct reference to the Rosenthal case when he delivered the charge to the two bodies. He gave the usual order for secrecy, and read those sections of the code that define the kind of crimes to be investigated.

"During the time of your service," said Judge Crain, "the public interests may render it advisable that you receive additional charges. The District Attorney may feel so. In such event you will be so charged."

The additional Grand Jury must look into 295 complaints that are pending. Of these, 157 are bail cases and 138 prison cases.

District Attorney Whitman called his force of assistants before him yesterday afternoon and called to their attention the figures cited by Judge Crain. Mr. Whitman also cited the fact, likewise mentioned by Judge Crain, that there were outstanding and awaiting trial 465 persons who had been indicted, and that of this number 182 were in prison and the rest out on bail.

The District Attorney gave his staff to understand that they must clear the calendars of these cases without further delay. Some of the assistants gave as an excuse for the accumulation of cases the extra work of the Rosenthal investigation.

WOMEN HURT IN AUTO CRASH.

Miss Galvin and Mrs. Goudsu in Collision Near Narragansett Pier.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 5.—Two motor touring cars going at a terrific pace met in a head-on collision on the road between the Pier and Saunderstown to-night. In a car owned by P. P. Galvin, and driven by William J. Galvin, was Miss Galvin of East Greenwich, R. I., who suffered a concussion of the brain and other serious injuries. After being cared for by Dr. Charles Hitchcock of New York she was taken to Quonset Point to-night.

The other car, driven by Nestoy Goudsu of Danielson, Conn., was badly damaged, and Mrs. Gmere Goudsu of Danielson suffered a fracture of the right leg below the knee. Others in the party who were injured were Frank Larou, Miss Mary N. Goudsu, and Nestoy Goudsu.

MISS DANBY COMES HOME.

Missing Mount Vernon Girl Says She Was Afraid to Return Sooner.

Miss Amelia Danby, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Danby of 70 South Fourth Avenue, Mount Vernon, who disappeared from her home on July 13, returned home late Sunday night. As the girl was a friend of Miss Dorcas I. Snodgrass, the Mount Vernon nurse, whose body was found in Dubois Creek, near Catskill, much alarm was felt for her safety.

From statements made by the girl, it appears that she was persuaded to leave her home, and the police may be called to act. Miss Danby said last night that she went to Clason Point on July 13, and that it became so late that she was induced to remain away over night. She said she had intended to come home, but after her experience she was afraid to.

CLUE IN SNODGRASS CASE.

Handkerchief with Star Picked Up Near Where Body Was Found.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 5.—A woman's handkerchief with an ornament in needlework containing a star in one corner, but without initials, was found by two young men yesterday near where the body of Miss Dorcas I. Snodgrass, the Mount Vernon nurse, was found on July 28 in Dubois Creek. District Attorney Wilbur will communicate with the Mount Vernon authorities in an effort to learn whether Miss Snodgrass had such a handkerchief.

The handkerchief was found near a dyke recently constructed on the Dubois farm, and the authorities say there is a possibility that if Miss Snodgrass committed suicide she might have made her way to the creek by way of this dyke.

Frank Poland, who lives in what is known as "The Swamp," near where the body was found, told the authorities today that two weeks ago he saw a young woman standing on a little bridge which spans Ram's Horn Creek. The bridge is in the vicinity of the Dubois dyke, and Sheriff Post and District Attorney Wilbur visited the scene to-day with Poland.

GERMANS TO SHELL AGADIR?

Report That Cruiser Will Bombard Port Owing to Murder There.

RABAT, Morocco, Aug. 5.—A German cruiser has, according to a rumor here, been ordered to bombard Agadir, in consequence of the recent murder of a German representing the firm of Mannesmann, which carries on extensive business there.

Hamid el Hiba, a former pretender to the Moroccan throne, has installed himself in that district as Sultan.

CALLS ROOSEVELT A BOSS.

J. A. Bingham of Indiana Says Colonel Is Power Mad.

Special to The New York Times.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Aug. 5.—"Do you think that if Edwin M. Lee had been appointed United States Marshal he would now be out organizing a Bull Moose Party? Do you think that if Albert J. Beveridge had been re-elected to the United States Senate he would now be leading the third party? Do you think that if Fred Landis had been returned to Congress, he would now be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Bull Moose ticket?" asked James A. Bingham, former Republican State Attorney General, addressing the Republican County Convention.

The reply was a chorus of "No" that resounded throughout the convention hall.

"The party was good enough for them while they were in office, but now that they are out it is not. The party was all right when they could run the party, but now that they can no longer run it, why, they go out and organize a party that they can run," exclaimed Mr. Bingham.

The speaker charged that Col. Roosevelt is the biggest boss that the country has ever known. He said:

"Not only is Roosevelt a boss, but he is a despotic boss. He is power mad and won't stop at anything. Four years ago he jammed a candidate down the throat of the people, a month ago he tried to jam himself down the same throat, and when he found that he could not do so he went off and made a new throat, which he is going to jump down this week."

WAR ON BIRDS WITH NOISE.

Montclair Has a Bombardment with Blank Shells.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Aug. 5.—Six men armed with shotguns invaded the Crescent here this evening and opened war on the thousands of grackles, starlings, and robins that have been making life miserable for the dwellers in the fashionable street all Summer. The armed men were deputies of the State Game and Fish Commission, under the leadership of James M. Stratton of Long Branch, whose official title is Protector.

The war against the birds to-night was a bloodless one, the deputies using only blank shells. Nevertheless, the bombardment furnished great excitement for the town. The deputies shot into the great trees that line the Crescent, and the cannonading was terrific, as the State officials used a powder that was designed to make the biggest kind of a noise. It is estimated that there were 20,000 birds in the trees when the first broadside was fired shortly after 6 o'clock. When the men fired the first volley all these birds flew up into the air, fairly blackening the sky. Every time they came down the deputies opened fire again, driving the birds from one section of the street to another. This was kept up until darkness fell.

THE TIMES'S DAILY TRANSATLANTIC WIRELESS AND CABLE DISPATCHES

MORLEY IS LIKELY TO QUIT CABINET

Veteran British Statesman, Tired of Public Life, Wants to "Return to His Books."

CREWE MAY SUCCEED HIM

Cabinet Post for the Master of Elibank Expected—Birrell Not to Succeed Ambassador Bryce.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 6.—Rumors of Ministerial changes are current, based, according to The Pall Mall Gazette's Parliamentary correspondent, on the impending retirement of Lord Morley from the Lord Presidency of the Council and the return of Lord Gladstone from South Africa.

Lord Morley has been able to give very little time to the House of Lords lately, and has been in attendance only when his presence has been required in some particular debate. It is only a matter of opportunity and of the convenience of the Prime Minister, it is understood, when Lord Morley will finally retire from office.

If the time has now arrived, it must be on account of the imminence of other changes. It has been evident that Lord Crewe has been feeling the strain of his continuous official service as Secretary of State for India, and it would not cause surprise if he were to succeed Lord Morley.

The morning papers, Ministerial and otherwise, give prominence to the reports of impending changes in the Cabinet, but it is officially denied that Lord Gladstone is about to resign the Governor Generalship of South Africa and to be succeeded by the Master of Elibank. It is understood, however, that the latter will shortly resign the office of Chief Whip and that he probably will have a place in the Cabinet.

A report that Mr. Birrell will resign the Chief Secretaryship for Ireland is also declared to be groundless. At one time he was named as the successor of Mr. Bryce at Washington, but The Daily Chronicle learns from an "unimpeachable source" that he will not be Mr. Bryce's successor.

Lord Morley, as was well known when he was at the India Office, made no concealment of his anxiety to "return to his books." His transfer to the Privy Council promised to give him greater relief from the continuous work and responsibility which his advanced age seemed to demand, but in his new office he has on more than one occasion been called upon to act at one and the same time as Foreign Minister, Secretary for India, President of the Privy Council, and Leader in the House of Lords.

It must, however, be said that any suggestion of Lord Morley's complete withdrawal from the Government would be regarded by the Liberal Party generally as premature and unnecessary.

THE ADAMS AT QUEENSTOWN.

Successful Operation Performed on One of Cadets in Mid-Ocean.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 5.—The training ship Adams of the Pennsylvania Nautical School arrived here to-day after a lengthy passage. She sailed 2,750 knots and steamed the remainder of the way. Head winds dogged her throughout.

Independence Day was celebrated by the flying of the American flag at each masthead and gaff and a special dinner, with speeches.

When in the vicinity of the scene of the Titanic disaster all hands mustered on deck and were addressed by Capt. Holman, silent prayers being offered for the dead. Liners were all chary about giving information of current events to the Adams's wireless operator.

On July 7 Cadet Finlay was operated upon for acute appendicitis by Surgeon Landry, and his life was saved by the surgeon's skill. During the operation sail was shortened and the vessel was steadied as much as possible.

On July 17 a carrier pigeon with silver and aluminium rings on its legs, marked "N. U. H. P. 3266," flew aboard, and took flight the next morning, taking its bearings apparently from the sun, and flying west.

The British Admiral here has extended all possible courtesies to the visitors, and has provided the Adams with a Government buoy. American Consul Chamberlin welcomed the visitors to port and an entertainment will be given in their honor.

The Adams will remain till next Sunday, and then will go to Southampton. The cadets will commence visits to Irish scenic beauty spots to-morrow. All are well.

MURDER IS FAMILY CLIMAX.

Succession of Tragic Events Ends in One Brother Killing Another.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Aug. 5.—The family of a rich baker named Alexino Sattler, residing at Zsebely, Hungary, have been victims of a remarkable series of tragic events within three days.

First, Sattler's son-in-law shot himself. Then his daughter went mad. Sattler himself jumped from the roof of his house and broke his neck.

Following this, the younger son, Edward, quarreled with his elder brother, Rudolf, over the inheritance, and employed a Roumanian lad to help him murder his brother and mother. Edward shot and killed Rudolf and the Roumanian stabbed the mother. The latter was not killed, but went out of her mind.

Edward and the Roumanian lad have been arrested.

YOUNG TURKS FALL; LEADERS FEAR JAIL

Sultan Dissolves Parliament After Chamber Voted Lack of Confidence in Cabinet.

STATE OF SIEGE IN CAPITAL

Troops Patrol Streets — Defeat of Committee of Union and Progress Favorable to Cause of Peace.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 6.—The Daily Mail's Constantinople correspondent, telegraphing yesterday, says:

"The situation to-day is unparalleled in Turkish history. Nothing has ever been seen to compare with the utter disorganization and confusion that now prevail in the Ministry.

"An iradé, or decree dissolving the Chamber having made its appearance last night, the President of the Chamber convoked the Deputies this morning and informed them of the Cabinet's decision. Thereupon Djavid Bey, ex-Minister of Finance, and one of the most fanatical of the Young Turks, made a violent speech, accusing the Ministry of perpetrating a coup d'état and repeating the events of April 13, 1909, when Abdul Hamid overthrew the Committee of Union and Progress. On that occasion, he said, the committee re-established the Constitution, punishing the reactionaries on the gibbet.

"'We will do the same again,' he added. He next proposed a vote of want of confidence, which was carried, whereupon the sitting adjourned.

"On the arrival of the Grand Vizier he read the decree of dissolution in the presence of only nine Deputies of the Opposition.

"There as yet has been no incident of disorder, but serious trouble is expected at any moment. The Ministry and military police have taken elaborate measures.

"In view of the attitude of the Opposition and in order to prevent regrettable incidents, the Government has decided to proclaim a state of siege, a form of martial law."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 5.—An imperial decree was issued to-day dissolving Parliament.

The Chamber passed a vote of want of confidence in the Cabinet. The President of the Chamber called at the palace to report the action of the Chamber, but the Sultan declined to receive him.

It is reported that the Cabinet has ordered the arrest of Talaat Bey, ex-Minister of the Interior; Djavid Bey, ex-Minister of Finance, and other leading members of the Committee of Union and Progress, (Young Turks.)

Order prevails, but the troops are held in readiness at important points and detachments are patroling the streets. A gunboat is anchored off the quay near the Parliament Building.

The Cabinet has decided to proclaim a state of siege in Constantinople for a period of forty days.

Since the Turks themselves are unable to tell what the present chaotic condition of affairs portends, it is difficult to make the situation clear to America readers; but two things are certain. These are that the Young Turkish Party, which led the movement that resulted in the deposition of Sultan Abdul Hamid and which since his fall has been in power, has been found wanting, and that the army, which aided the Young Turks in the revolution of 1909, has now turned against them.

The Young Turks' executive body is the Committee of Union and Progress. This committee has been an even worse tyrant than was the ex-Sultan. As one leading Turk recently described the situation, under Abdul Hamid there was one tyrant, while under the committee there were a hundred.

Even in cruelty and injustice the Young Turks are said to have surpassed the "Red Sultan," and the stories that have been told in regard to the methods of suppression in Albania have appalled Europe. The present crisis arises primarily from the Albanian insurrection. The old Turkish Cabinet resigned on July 17 largely because of its inability to accept the conditions which Mahmud Mukhtar demanded as the price of his acceptance of the War Portfolio—amnesty measures and clemency toward the Albanian rebels and the withdrawal of all troops from Albania. Mahmud Shefket Pasha, who had previously held the post of War Minister, resigned on July 10 as a protest against the action of the Committee of Union and Progress in interfering with his orders to the troops.

The contest for supremacy has resolved itself into one between the new Military League, which was pledged to procure the appointment of a new Cabinet that would enjoy the confidence of the powers, and the Committee of Union and Progress, which had been in control of the Government since the revolution of 1909.

The ending of the war with Italy is believed to have been brought a good deal nearer by the recent events in Turkey. All the great powers are exerting pressure toward this end, and it is thought that the visit of the French Premier, M. Poincaré, to Russia, for which country he started yesterday, will result in further measures with a view to peace.

DANISH-AMERICAN PARK IS OPENED

King Christian Speaks at Inauguration of Gift of Emigrants to Their Home Land.

MINISTER EGAN'S ADDRESS

Danes Have Given America More Than It Has Given to Them, He Says—Elaborate Ceremonies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 5.—The dedication took place to-day, in the presence of King Christian, a number of high officials, 2,000 Americans from all parts of the United States, and 10,000 Danes, of the Danish-American Park presented to their home country by Danish-born Americans representing sixteen States of the Union.

The park is located on a large tract of land in the Rebild Hills of Jutland, amid a wilderness of Danish heather.

Addresses were delivered by King Christian and many others. A message from President Taft was read.

In a deed which was handed to the King it is stipulated that the park shall be exclusively reserved for Americans on July the 4th and other days celebrated as holidays throughout the United States, while everybody shall be admitted on other days. It is hoped that from next year all Americans, whether natives or foreign born, who are visiting Denmark will meet to celebrate the Fourth of July in the Danish-American National Park.

AALBORG, Denmark, Aug. 5.—The inauguration of the Danish-American National Park in the Rebild Hills of Jutland took place to-day before a huge gathering.

Among the speeches delivered at the opening was one by Dr. Maurice F. Egan, the American Minister to Denmark, on "What Americans Owe to the Danes." In the course of it he said:

"In every Danish community in the United States the evil most hated is ignorance, and it is a proverb in all parts of our country that a Dane will sacrifice everything for the education of his children. What he has gained from America one of the most beloved of all the Danes in America, Count Moltke, will tell you. For myself I can say seriously that the Danish-American, the industrial worker, the careful farmer, the skillful engineer, the admirable teacher, who is likewise often a preacher, has given to us more than we could possibly give to him.

King Christian then spoke, expressing on behalf of Denmark the nation's thanks for the gift of the park and warm appreciation of the love of their native country on the part of the Danes in America which it had proved. After King Christian's speech, which was loudly cheered, the flags of the United States and Denmark were hoisted on the highest places in the park.

Furniture That Rings True

It Is the ONLY Kind That You Can Find in This GIMBEL August Sale

¶ You can get at the real worth of a friend only by testing him under all sorts of conditions. If he "rings true" invariably he is the right sort of a friend to have.

¶ This Gimbel Furniture has capacity for exactly that kind of friendship. And we have done all the testing for you. You may choose any of it, as it happens to suit your taste, your home, your pocketbook, and be SURE of its evenness of disposition in every case. In gathering it we have been as careful to get sound wood and sound workmanship—which don't show—as of the good taste of the designs—which DO show.

¶ And, since the very beginning of the Sale, we have been much impressed with the public appreciation of the beauty of the Furniture, and the tendency toward the buying of the finer pieces.

¶ There are plenty of perfectly plain, simple pieces, and many delightful reproductions of pure period styles. As to economy, you can make a saving of $1 on every $5 or $10, or $5 in every $10, according to the pieces you choose. But in every case we underwrite your investment absolutely—your saving is safe.

Consider the Economy of Macy Prices

We buy and sell under unique conditions.
We buy for cash only.

We and our competitors in the current Furniture Sales buy from the same sources, just as we sell to the same public.

Most of the manufacturers give greatest concessions where they get quickest cash. Others, buying on credit and selling on credit, must necessarily pay more and charge more than we.

In deciding where to invest in furniture this month, find what actual BASIS there is for the price-advantages claimed and urged upon your attention. Weigh them one against another. Eliminate until you find the ONE Store that can vindicate its claims.

And that store will be Macy's

ADDITIONAL Home-furnishing Sales have been planned to co-operate with the Mid-summer Furniture Sale, and every value offered ranks with those which lift the Macy Furniture Sale above the mediocrity of others.

HARVESTER COMPANY DENIES IT IS A TRUST

Declares It Spends $500,000 Annually in Improvements and Bettering Trade Conditions.

ITS BOOKS ARE ALWAYS OPEN

Enjoys No Monopoly Through Patents, and Has Decreased Prices of Farm Machinery, Answer Avers.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 5.—The answer of the International Harvester Company to the bill filed by the United States under the Sherman anti-trust law was filed to-day in the United States District Court in this city.

The answer denies specifically all charges of restraint of trade, monopoly, and unfair business practices. It alleges that prior to the formation of the company, in 1902, the harvester business had been conducted in a wasteful manner, detrimental alike to manufacturers, retail dealers, and consumers; that only the two largest manufacturers had profitable businesses, while the business of others was decreasing and becoming hazardous and unprofitable.

The International Harvester Company, it is set forth, is not an unlawful combination, but a new company, formed, with ample capital, in order to obtain large economies in the agricultural implement business by producing more cheaply the raw materials, by enlarging facilities and correcting wasteful methods of distribution, by expanding the foreign trade, and by better organized experimental and inspection departments.

The company's commercial power has been used not only for the benfit of its stockholders, but also for the benefit of the farmers and dealers and of its employes; and the taking on of new lines of manufacture, such as gasoline engines, tractors, auto wagons, farm wagons, cream separators, and manure spreaders, has resulted in the business as a whole being conducted more economically and in fostering, instead of restraining, trade, it is asserted.

Any monopoly through patents is denied on the ground that the basic patents on binders and mowers expired prior to 1902.

The detailed statement of earnings and profits contained in the answer shows that during the first eight years the dividends paid averaged only 5.92 per cent. on the fully paid capital stock and the total earnings only 7.15 per cent., and that the main expansion in the company's business has been gained in the new lines of implements and the foreign trade, which has increased from about $10,000,000 in 1903 to more than $42,000,000 in 1911.

It is held that the company has active and increasing competition, the number of competitors in binders being eight, with an aggregate capital of more than $100,000,000, and in other lines the competitors numbering from 14 in mowers to 181 in gasoline engines.

The answer declares that the prices of harvesting machinery have increased about 2 per cent. over those of 1902, while the machines have been improved in quality and the materials and labor entering into their manufacture have increased on an average 25 per cent.

As to binder twine, the answer asserts that since the company was formed the wholesale price of sisal twine has fallen from 11 to 6½ cents a pound, and of manila twine from 13½ cents to 7⅞ cents a pound. Further, that the company has expended more than $1,000,000 in the effort to produce binder twine from American-grown flax, which, if successful, would have kept within the United States $20,000,000 now expended annually for imported sisal and manila fibres.

The answer alleges that the company spends in developing and improving machines annually $500,000, a cost which none of the old companies would have sustained. By producing its own lumber, iron, and steel, the company says, it can select materials of the particular quality best adapted to the machines, thus increasing their strength without increasing the cost.

The wages and conditions of its employes, the answer says, have been improved by the Harvester Company to an extent impossible under trade conditions existing prior to 1902. Wages have been increased fully 27 per cent.; profit-sharing systems have been established, sanitary and safety appliances installed, a liberal plan of workmen's compensation put into effect, with a benefit department providing sick and death benefits for employes, and a generous pension system.

It is further declared that the company has given wide publicity to its business, and in 1906 invited a full investigation by the Department of Commerce and Labor; that since 1907 the Bureau of Corporations has had full access to its books and records and every facility for obtaining complete information as to its business policies and methods; that since 1907 the company has filed with the Bureau of Corporations its annual reports, covering all business operations, and that it welcomes the utmost publicity and public supervision, and is ready and is desirous of remedying any defects or mismanagement in its business; that, relying upon the advice of able legal counsel as to the entire legality of its organization, the company had made enormous investments in developing its foreign and domestic trade, and that its stock has been purchased by the general public and by more than 3,600 employes, who have received stock under the company's profit-sharing plans.

The answer avers that, considering the capital invested and the hazards of the business, the company's earnings have been reasonable and much smaller than the average profits of manufacturing companies; that the public and employes are receiving the benefits of the large economies and increased efficiency resulting from the organization; that there is a difference between the Harvester Company and illegal trusts and combinations; that the company is managed by men whose fathers originally developed the harvester business, and that it was organized without excessive capitalization and without any purpose of creating a monopoly or securing quick fortunes from stock sales or excessive earnings.

It is pointed out that during twenty years before the company's formation more than fifty competitors have been eliminated from the harvester business, and that since then there has been no such elimination of competitors, but that the company's business methods have given fair treatment to competitors, and have tended to foster competition and not to destroy it.

The answer insists that the United States Government, having had for ten years full knowledge of the company's organization and methods and their beneficial effect upon the trade and public, ought not, after thousands of employes and others have made large investments in its stock, be permitted in a court of equity to urge that the corporation is illegal and should be destroyed.

INSANITY DUE TO SYMPATHY.

Sheriff Loses Mind in Effort to Reform His Prisoners.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Aug. 5.—Sheriff John Villwock's sympathy for his prisoners is declared by physicians to be the cause of the sheriff's insanity. He has been taken to the State Asylum.

On taking office Villwock promised that he would do his utmost to induce every prisoner in his charge to reform. He was tireless in his efforts to aid them.

Dr. Eliot Returns.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—Returning from a journey around the world in a campaign for international peace, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, arrived here to-day on the steamer China from Honolulu, accompanied by Mrs. Eliot and his granddaughter, Miss Ruth Eliot. They will start to-morrow for their Summer home at Mount Desert, Me.

NAGEL ADMITS SIROTTAS.

Believes Woman's Statement, but Requires Bond for Child's Education.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—As the result of an appeal to President Taft to reverse the decision of immigration authorities at New York, Basche Sirotta of Buenos Aires and her 7-year-old daughter have been ordered admitted to the United States.

Secretary Nagel granted the appeal, on condition that the child be put under $500 boud to guarantee her education.

In her apepal to the President the mother complained that the little girl had been subjected to the "inquisitorial torture" of the immigration officials, who had ordered their deportation on the ground that they might become public charges and because there were discrepancies in the testimony at the hearing.

These discrepancies were cleared up, and Secretary Nagel said he believed the immigrant's declaration that she was a self-supporting dressmaker. She has two brothers and two sisters in New York.

Hanford's Resignation Is Accepted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—President Taft to-day accepted the resignation of Federal Judge Hanford of Seattle, tendered while Judge Hanford's conduct on the bench was being investigated by a Congressional committee. The committee advised acceptance of the resignation and the dropping of impeachment proceedings.

Will Fight for Catlin's Seat.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—When the report of the House Elections Committee, declaring vacant the seat of Representative Catlin of St. Louis, and seating Patrick F. Gill, his opponent, was made today, friends of Catlin indicated their intention of making a fight. Minority Leader Mann asked that action by the House be deferred and five days be granted to the minority members of the committee to file a dissenting report. The time was allowed.

FLIES WITH CHINESE AVIATOR.

Gen. Lan Tien Woi Says His Country Must Adopt Aeroplanes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—The only Chinese aviator in the world, Tom Gunn, made an aeroplane flight at Alameda yesterday with Gen. Lan Tien Woi, formerly in command of the Manchurian Army of the Chinese Republic, and now in this country to inspect the American Army.

The General was taken one thousand feet up and carried through turns and dips in fearless fashion. When he set foot on earth he announced unqualifiedly that aviation would be introduced into the Chinese Republican Army.

Tom Gunn wishes to be aviator in chief. He is only 19 years old, but remarkably cautious for his years. He began his apprenticeship in an aeroplane factory, believing, he said, soberly, that "it is better to learn this business from the ground up than the other way."

WORKED AMONG CANNIBALS.

The Rev. Fred Patton Tells of Experiences in the New Hebrides.

EAST NORTHFIELD, Aug. 5.—For the second time in his career as missionary in the New Hebrides, the Rev. Fred Patton returned to civilization to deliver addresses on his work, which included one which formed a feature of to-day's session of the Northfield conference of Christian workers.

Mr. Patton told of his experiences with cannibals of the South Seas and of numerous narrow escapes from death. He said that largely through the work of the missionaries the islands now had been transformed and former man-eating fighters had become peaceful citizens. He appealed for more missionaries to be sent to that region.

TAFT ADDS TO SNARL IN WAR DEPARTMENT

Upsets Predictions by Appointing Col. George Andrews to be Adjutant General.

SENATE FIGHT MAY FOLLOW

Col. Steever Is Made Brigadier General—Friends of Funston and Bliss Unfriendly to Promotion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The President to-day added to an already ugly snarl arising from the advancement of certain officers in the army when he appointed Col. Edgar Z. Steever of the Fourth Cavalry as Brigadier General, to succeed Brig. Gen. Chase, who was retired last week, and Col. George Andrews of the Adjutant General's Department, to be Adjutant General, succeeding Gen. W. P. Hall, retired.

The promotion of Col. Steever had been expected for several months. That of Col. Andrews was a surprise in a measure, and is likely to be much criticised because a strong fight had been made to win the prize for Col. Heistand, the ranking Colonel in the Adjutant General's department, who will soon be ordered to Governors Island.

Col. Andrews, if the Senate confirms his nomination, will be retired for age on Aug. 26, 1914. Col. Heistand, had he been appointed, would have been at the head of the Adjutant General's department until 1920 before retiring. Both officers are graduates of West Point, Col. Andrews being a member of the class of 1876, and Col. Heistand of the class of 1878. Col. Heistand, however, was appointed a Major in the Adjutant General's department by President McKinley in 1897, and Col. Andrews in 1898, and so became the senior.

There is talk of stubborn opposition in the Senate from Col. Heistand's friends, and no doubt there will be a bitter fight over the Andrews nomination, together with the general fight that is coming on the nomination of Gen. Wotherspoon to be a Major General, and Gen. Edwards to be a Brigadier General in the line. These nominations, together with that of Col. McClernand to be a Brigadier General, were sent to the Senate on June 17, and have been hung up ever since. They are now in the hands of a sub-committee consisting of Senators Brisow of Kansas, du Pont of Delaware, and Johnston of Alabama. Senator Bristow is said to be opposed to the confirmation of Gen. Wotherspoon because Gen. Funston, who comes from Kansas, is the senior Brigadier, and in the Senator's judgment should have the promotion. It is understood that Senator Bristow will fight the confirmation of Gen. Wotherspoon to the end.

Meantime there are many Senators who think that a great injustice has been done to Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, who is recognized in the army as a remarkably fine organizer and the man who, as Chief of Staff, would be able to effect the reorganization of the army. The Edwards appointment was followed within a few days by the nomination of Col. Frank McIntyre, assistant to Gen. Edwards in the Bureau of Insular Affairs to be his successor, with the rank and pay of a Brigadier General. This nomination, coming before Gen. Edwards's confirmation, created a vacancy, surprised the Senate, and the McIntyre nomination went into the basket with the rest.

Col. McIntyre, who is an exceptionally fine officer, comes from Alabama, and the aim of the President was to get the help of Southern Senators who are friendly to Col. McIntyre, to help through the Edwards appointment. The irony of the situation, so far as Gen. Edwards is concerned, is that if he is not confirmed, and Col. McIntyre gets his old post, Gen. Edwards will be without a place in the army, having lost his file in the Infantry line. If he could go back to the line where he was taken out of it by the favor of President Taft, he would be only a Lieutenant Colonel within a few numbers of the bottom of the list.

His friends say they have little anxiety about his being confirmed eventually, but it is clear that a situation is being built up around the President that may make an issue of Brig. Gen. Funston, who has been jumped by three of the five Major Generals.

The President promoted Col. Steever so he could retire as a Brigadier General, probably on his own application. He has an infirmity of sight, which, in case of active military duties, makes it doubtful if he could take command of troops in the field. He has, however, handled the troubled condition of affairs along the Mexican border for a year, and has received the highest commendation of the War Department for his excellent service there.

His nomination came as a recognition of the fidelity and efficiency with which he has occupied the trying position of being in command at El Paso during the troubles of the last year. A statement by an official at the War Department to-day says:

"In spite of the difficulty of the position no mistake has been made by him, and he has won the approbation not only of his superior officers but of the officials and citizens of Texas, where he has been stationed."

Col. Steever is a native of Pennsylvania. He was graduated second in his class at the Military Academy. He has a creditable record of service in this country and in the Philippines, having been in no less than thirty-four battles and skirmishes with Filipinos during the years 1899 and 1900.

Col. Andrews was born in Rhode Island in 1850, and is a son of Brig. Gen. George L. Andrews, retired. He became attached to the Adjutant General's department in May, 1896, and served in Cuba during two yellow fever epidemics.

FALSEHOOD, CRIES CANNON.

Ex-Speaker Passes the Lie in the House, but Nothing Happens.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The lie was passed on the floor of the House to-day when ex-Speaker Cannon denounced as "unqualifiedly untrue" a charge by Representative Burnett of Alabama, Democrat, that when Speaker Mr. Cannon had deliberately led his followers from the chamber to break a quorum and in that way defeat immigration legislation.

Before impeaching Mr. Burnett's veracity, Mr. Cannon twice asked him to retract. There was no scene.

The incident happened during consideration of a bill by Representative Kindred of New York, which would fine common carriers that bring insane persons into the United States. Mr. Cannon was discussing the measure when Mr. Burnett interrupted him and declared the ex-Speaker had always been opposed to such legislation, and cited the alleged Republican bolt in the previous Congress.

"The gentleman is mistaken in his statement," retorted Mr. Cannon, thrusting forward a long forefinger, "and I ask him to retract."

Mr. Burnett answered that he had his information from Republican members, and Mr. Cannon in slower and more impressive tones repeated his demand for a retraction. It was not forthcoming.

"Then I answer that statement with the declaration that it is unqualifiedly untrue," shouted Mr. Cannon, bringing his fist down on his desk.

For a moment the situation was tense, but Mr. Burnett waved the matter aside. The bill was stricken from the calendar by the objection of Representative Bartholdt, Republican.

PHILLIPS ROYALTIES NOW WORTH $46,000

Murdered Author's Estate First Estimated at Less Than a Third of This Sum.

NEW VALUES DISCOVERED

"The Grain of Dust" the Best Paying of His Novels—Mrs. Frevert, a Sister, His Sole Heir.

At the time of his death, on Jan. 24, 1911, the property of David Graham Phillips, the author, who was shot by an insane musician, consisted almost entirely of royalties on his works. According to an appraisal filed yesterday in the Transfer Tax Office of the Surrogates' Court by Deputy State Controller Wallace S. Fraser, the estate is valued at $46,183.04 after all deductions have been made.

The estate was appraised at $13,000 soon after the author's death by W. Holden Weeks, who was later removed. When the report was sent for approval to the office of Thomas E. Rush, attorney for State Controller William Sohmer, an investigation was made which resulted in the discovery of other property. John V. Coggey was appointed as a new appraiser, and he found additional property amounting to about $33,000.

Mr. Phillips owned no realty or securities, and his cash account in the American Exchange National Bank was only $298.48. The deductions amounted to $1,698.81, including $80 for debts, $250 for administration expenses, and $600 for funeral expenses. His articles of apparel and jewelry amounted to $96.

The author's most valuable work, "The Grain of Dust," was valued, in the former appraisal, at $8,259.02, but this later report places the royalty value at $12,544.15. It was stated in an affidavit that the amount accrued from the royalties of the dramatization of this book was only $1,500. "White Magic" was staged, but the royalties paid nothing, and the book was valued at only $104.

The Cosmopolitan paid D. Appleton & Co. $7,000 for the privilege of printing serially "The Price She Paid." This amount was paid to Mr. Phillips's estate, but the estate will not receive anything from the sale of the novel when it is printed. This is accounted for by the fact that an arrangement was made between Mr. Phillips and D. Appleton & Co. by means of which the company was to be reimbursed for certain payments which they made to him prior to his death.

The values placed on the other works of David Graham Phillips are in accordance with a schedule supplied to the appraiser by D. Appleton & Co., who published practically all of his works. Among the novels, "The Second Generation" is valued at $1,522; "The Hungry Heart," $4,509; "Light Fingered Gentry," $13.62; "Old Wives for New," $69.90; "Worth of a Woman," $19.51; "Joshua Craig," $16.50; "The Conflict," $5,583; "Husband's Story," $1,167; "George Helm," $5,000. Among the articles and short stories are "De Garmo's Wife," $2,250; "Hawk Errant," $675; "Red Rose and White," $2,050; "The Little Joker," $750; "Restless Husbands," $750. Among the unpublished manuscripts are "The Landlady's Daughter," "Ceres," and "Susan"; also "The Sneak," valued at $300, and "Good News," valued at $1,000.

The publishers said that they were unable to fix any definite amount as the fair market value of the royalties because of the uncertainty of future sales. The only way they could aid the appraiser was to make a schedule of the sales from the date of publication to the time when the report was filed.

By his will Mr. Phillips leaves his entire estate to his sister, Mrs. Caroline Frevert, who lives at 119 East Nineteenth Street. Mr. Phillips was shot on Jan. 23, 1911. His slayer was Fitzhugh Coyle Goldsborough, a musician who was said to be insane, and who thought that Mr. Phillips was a "literary vampire" who portrayed the Goldsborough family unfavorably in one of his novels.

SUSPECT SAME BANDITS.

Jeweler's Family, Robbed, Say Thieves Killed Son Three Years Ago.

The family of Mrs. H. Tannenholz, who runs the jewelry store of H. Tannenholz & Sons at 855 Lexington Avenue, which was held up about three years ago by robbers, who shot and killed Maurice Tannenholz and wounded his mother, has again been robbed, and it is believed by the Tannenholz family that the thieves were the same ones who made the first attack. They were never caught after the shooting and escaped in a taxicab with two trays of diamonds. Mrs. Tannenholz recovered from her wounds, but her son died on Dec. 21, 1911, at the Presbyterian Hospital. Three weeks after the son's death the store and its stock were completely ruined by a fire.

On July 27 last, while the family was away, the apartments above the store were entered and about $300 worth of clothing taken. Coming as it did after all the other troubles, this second robbery caused a nervous breakdown of Mrs. Tannenholz, and for the past week she has been confined to her bed. The family will not disclose why they think the second robbery was perpetrated by the same band which committed the first and murdered Maurice Tannenholz.

DROWNS IN LAKE HOPATCONG

Stanley R. Philip of Newark Loses His Life Diving.

Stanley R. Philip, 23 years old, receiving teller of the Franklin Savings Institution of Newark, N. J., was drowned in Lake Hopatcong yesterday. Roland W. Hopper, 18 years old, of 225 South Sixth Street, made a gallant effort to save his friend when he sank after diving from a stake on the platform of his canoe shed. Hopper was dragged down by the drowning man and nearly lost his life.

The accident occurred in front of the Philip cottage, and in sight of the young man's mother, who was prostrated with grief.

SEABRIGHT LAWN TENNIS.

Doubles Tournament Reaches Final—Prentice and Schley Winners.

Bernon S. Prentice and Reeve Schley won the doubles championship at tennis for the third consecutive year when they defeated Col. Babbitt and Arthur J. Cumnock by 6—0, 6—2, 6—4. The work of the winners was marked by fine all-around tennis in combination with superior team work.

For the singles championship, which started with twenty-six entries, the play has reached the semi-finals. In the upper half, Charles C. Auchincloss plays Carl F. Adams and Bernon S. Prentice will face Col. Babbitt. With such high-class players as Howard A. Plummer, Benjamin Johnson, and Gardiner H. Miller the class of entries has been of high calibre, and the list exceptionally large.

Prentice has won the singles for eight years, but the adherents of the other players are looking for an upset should he reach the final round. The grass courts are now at their best, having been groomed in a manner which proved a great success.

MODEL AEROPLANE AWARDS.

Jean Roche Wins First Prize at Aero Show Contest.

Prizes won by schoolboys in the model aeroplane competition in connection with the recent aero show, were presented to the winners last night at the Aero Club of America. Henry A. Wise Wood, Vice President of the club, made the presentation, and Charles E. Spratt represented the International Exposition Company, donor of the four silver cups. Nearly twenty young aeronauts took part in the competition.

The first prize was won by Jean Roche, with an original monoplane; Nicholas S. Schloeder secured second prize, with George A. Page, Jr., Henry E. Ragot, and Percy W. Pierce, respectively, third, fourth, and fifth. Several unique and original designs were flown.

The event was held on the closing evening of the show in the New Grand Central Palace, and was conducted by the New York Model Aero Club, which had an exhibit at the show. The models were not especially built for this contest, and most of them had been damaged more or less through handling by the visitors during the week of the exhibition. The contestants were not notified of the kind of contest that was to be held until they were at the starting line. Owing to the limited space these contests had to be originated on the spot.

PLAN TO HELP TAFT FAILS.

Twelve Electors in Missouri Decline to Pledge Votes for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 5.—Efforts of the Taft adherents to bunch the Republican Presidential Electors of Missouri failed to-day at a meeting held here. It developed that twelve of the eighteen Electors were not Taft men and wouldn't go on record as promising to vote for him, even if he should carry the State.

The meeting was called by Chairman Charles D. Morris of the Republican State Committee, whose failure to attend was not explained. Thomas K. Niedringhaus, National Committeeman, also was absent, and so was Secretary Joseph Finch of the State Committee. Gov. Hadley was in town, but later found his farm more enticing than the gathering.

Only one resolution was offered. It was presented by Otto F. Stifel of St. Louis. It provided that the Electors should vote for Taft, but in the event it became apparent that he could not be elected, then they would be at liberty to vote for some other Republican. The resolution never got out of Stifel's hands. Some of the Taft men and all the Roosevelt followers objected to it.

With two or three exceptions, the Electors selected as Roosevelt men said they did not indorse the third party move, but still they would not go to the length of saying that they would support Taft. W. R. Ennis of Kansas City intimated that he would probably withdraw as an Elector. He left before the end of the meeting.

Days of usefulness over

Never really wears out

ALCO

Motor Trucks

How Long Do Your Horses Live?

Most horses have a working life of only four years. After that period of usefulness they are sold cheaply, drift from bad to worse, either die on an icy pavement or under a sizzling sun—or else they go back to the farm.

Sometimes horses last seven, eight and even nine years—but the day's work for such horses is usually not severe. Each horse has a certain amount of work in him and when that is taken out he is done for. It may take only two years to work the usefulness out of a horse.

Some concerns work a horse only two years and then sell him. They say it is more profitable to buy a fresh horse every two years.

But an Alco motor truck lasts more than twice as long. If an axle wears out a new one may replace it immediately. If a wheel goes bad a new wheel may be put on. If a motor has outlived its usefulness, a new one may be put in in a few minutes.

Thus an Alco truck may last—one might almost be tempted to say—forever. No Alco truck has ever worn out and there are Alco trucks five years old.

Before your horses give out why don't you acquaint yourself with the facts about the Alco truck? Every man who owns a horse should know about Alco trucks. They are being used possibly in the very same line of business as yours.

PREPARING TO FOOL THE PEOPLE.

Mr. ROOSEVELT's friends appear to derive great comfort from their repeated assertions that the trusts flourish by dissolution under the Sherman act. In his speech as Temporary Chairman at the Progressive Convention yesterday, Mr. BEVERIDGE said that the people had tired "of this mock battle with criminal capital." He puts the case in this way:

> What good does it do any man to read in his morning paper that the courts have "dissolved" the Oil Trust, and then read in his evening paper that he must thereafter pay a higher price for his oil than ever before? What good does it do the laborer who smokes his pipe to be told that the courts have "dissolved" the Tobacco Trust and yet find that he must pay the same or a higher price for the same short weight package of tobacco? Yet all this is the practical result of the suits against these two greatest trusts in the world.

There must have been some defect or oversight in carrying out the decrees of the court. Yet it appears to be true that these two trusts were, in fact, dissolved; that the law was enforced. What more could Mr. BEVERIDGE ask? If prices have gone up, somebody has been fooled. The advantages of concentration have been forfeited, and either competition has not been restored or else competition does not reduce prices. Would Mr. BEVERIDGE force the constituent companies of the old trust to compete savagely by cutting prices? It was pointed out at the time these trusts were dissolved that the hope of benefit to the people through lowering of prices was delusive. That has proved to be the fact.

If the past utterances of the chief of the Progressives may be taken as a guide, we may assume that the remedy that party will prescribe for trust abuses is not prosecution, but control through Federal incorporation, or some such means. Mr. ROOSEVELT has said that he does not complain of the bigness of the corporation, only its wickedness. With a Federal agent in the counting room, wickedness, we suppose, will be prevented. But will that device lower prices? The Government will become virtually a partner in each business it regulates and controls. Inevitably, it must approve and consent to a scale of prices that will permit reasonable profits. Otherwise there will be no corporations to control, except in bankruptcy proceedings. The arrangement would virtually make the Government the guarantor of profits. For one thing, competition will be abolished, just as it has been abolished in the railroad business. Prices would be maintained at a profitable level, and immunity from prosecution would be secured.

This, we suppose, is the prospect that so pleases those gentlemen of the trusts who have joined the Progressive forces. Under regulation according to the Roosevelt plan, they would be comfortable and prosperous. But would the people get their oil, their harvesters, their tobacco, their sugar, and their other trust-made commodities any cheaper? That is really the main question, or it should be the main question for a candidate who has made himself the champion of the people. Human experience forbids us to hope that prices would be lower under this kind of Federal control. Apparently, the people would be fooled again. But they are used to being fooled, they really seem to like it.

THE DUTY OF ELECTORS.

Insisting that Electors chosen before the Chicago convention as Republicans may now honorably consider themselves Roosevelt Electors, the Progressives point out that there is no law to compel Presidential Electors to vote in the Electoral College for the candidate of the party to which they belong and by which they were nominated to vote for the candidate of the party. True, there is no constitutional provision or general or special statute upon the subject; but there are some duties that are so apparent, some obligations that are so imperative and binding, that legislative enactments are not required to give them full force and effect.

Such, at any rate, has been the sense of the American people always, and there is recorded only one case of where an Elector chosen to record the choice of his party for President violated his obligation. This act was performed by WILLIAM PLUMER of New Hampshire, in 1820, "who did not consider," says MCKEE, "that he was "merely to perfunctorily record the "choice of his party, therefore he exercised what he considered his power "and duty as an Elector by voting for "ADAMS. He disapproved of MONROE's "administration, and also desired to "draw attention to his friend ADAMS, "who was elected President at the next "election."

It is not stated, but it is reasonable to infer from what is known about human nature, that Mr. PLUMER did not have the chance of voting for ADAMS "at the next election." It is interesting to recall this fact in our political history for the purpose of showing how the men chosen Presidential Electors have ever regarded their function and how jealously they have respected the obligation of fair play reposed in them by their party associates. Another reason for noting this exception here is to refresh the public mind as to WILLIAM PLUMER by mentioning the only act for which he is to be remembered.

WISCONSIN WEARIED OF VOTING.

A letter published in The Atlantic Monthly for August, and signed by ELLIS B. USHER of Milwaukee, gives these figures of the Wolverine vote:

> Under the direct primary system Wisconsin is casting a steadily diminishing percentage of her total vote. The census of 1910 gives Wisconsin's male population of 21 years of age and over at 683,743. That year, in our State election, we polled 319,462 votes for all parties. By the census of 1880 the State had a population of voting age of 340,482. The total vote for Governor that year was 319,978. For Governor, RUSK polled more votes in 1884 than MCGOVERN polled in 1910. LA FOLLETTE has never polled as large a vote in the State as that polled by his immediate predecessor, Gov. SCOFIELD. In 1905, 22 per cent. of the total vote of the State stayed away from the polls. In 1910, 53¼ per cent. were absent.

These figures hardly call for more comment than they make themselves. Of making many votes there is no end, and the primary is a weariness of the flesh.

TWO WAYS WITH TRUSTS.

The bill of Representative STANLEY for the dissolution of the Steel Trust was given to the public yesterday. On the same day was published the decree of another famous trust buster, Judge LANDIS, forever restraining two newspaper associations—it is rather begging the question to describe them as newspaper trusts—from such methods of unfair competition as might result in establishing a monopoly of the distribution of news to "patent inside" newspapers. Here again is something rather begging the question. If the two associations should combine, and either instead of both should distribute news to many million readers of several thousand small country newspapers, would that constitute a monopoly? It would be an undesirable thing that so large a section of public opinion should insidiously be shaped by persons so comparatively unknown as those introduced as defendants in this case. It is highly desirable that news and opinion should be what they seem, in order that opinions, and public policies based upon opinions, should be sound. It does not appear that such is not the fact in this case. It is not alleged that opinion is contaminated, but that it might be, and, if in fact it were, there is an end of discussion. No one would defend contamination of opinion, or anything which endangered it. But the question now is not about opinions, but about methods of controlling trusts.

The Stanley way is to dissolve a trust which legislators and politicians think bad, but which the trade thinks good. Mr. STANLEY has settled it to his own satisfaction that the trust's facilities are so great that its profits are excessive, and he aims a blow at the method by which the profits were made. He does not stop to ask whether the profits were made in the commodity market or the security market, nor whether either sort of profit would not be made in other ways if this way were blocked. Mr. STANLEY does not distinguish between the deeds of the trust and the personal misdeeds of gentlemen more or less directly associated with the trust. He would punish either or both indiscriminately. It is not suggested that he would do this with any idea of harming the public interest, or that he has any but the highest motives. The point which is made is that he does not punish misconduct, but a mere business device, which happens to be the method used in this particular case, after certain other methods fell under legal condemnation. It is futile to legislate to stop men's thinking, or to imagine that the ability which devised the method Mr. STANLEY dislikes would not devise others. To punish, or to prevent, or to abolish a device of trade which is in accord with the best opinion of trade, and which is not used wickedly in this specific case in the opinion of those directly affected by it, is futile and inept.

On the other hand, the Government has caught what is described as a news trust in the most wicked of acts. The complaint of the Government and the decree of the court are so alike that it is difficult to tell which is which without identification. "If," pleads the Government, "these defendants are allowed either to kill the other, or both to "combine to form a monopoly, the molding of opinion will be corrupted." "If," says the decree, "all plate and ready "print were to be supplied by one concern, then full and free discussion of "important questions from different "points, which is essential to their "proper understanding, and hence necessary to the best public interest, "would be prevented." Therefore the defendants are enjoined from combining, or from such fierceness of competition as would result in the survival of either alone. There are distinct allegations of such immoral and savage competition as is condemned by the rule of reason, and which was made the basis of the orders of dissolution of the Oil and Tobacco Trusts. In this case, however, the order is preventive, and instead of an order of dissolution there is an order against combination.

This is rather an oddity. There is no proof nor even allegation of the corruption of opinion, but merely argument that it would be contrary to public interest if it should occur, which nobody could or would deny. But instead of punishing the wicked acts which are alleged, and which, if unpunished, would produce the corruption of public opinion if it were molded by the monopoly which might result, the Government institutes a prosecution in a civil suit, and the result is the entering of an "agreed" decree giving the wicked men just what they want. The deadly trade enemies and the foe of both of them agree to bury the past, and this particular monopoly is estopped.

We dislike to see guilty men escape as much as to see innocent men punished. If this news trust is as bad as is alleged, it ought to be put on its defense before a jury, and take the verdict. We know nothing of the facts except those announced, but the time for condonation of acts by trusts passed with the announcement of the rule of reason. If trusts now offend they should take the results of their offending without agreed findings. The quicker surrender is made unconditional, the quicker the trust question will be solved by healing from the bottom, without the glossing over of hidden corruption by plasters or salves. Theoretical legislation and friendly prosecution are equally objectionable. There is no excuse for any man of business not complying with the rule of reason, and there is no excuse for leniency toward those who violate it. It is time both to refrain from persecuting the good and from practicing leniency toward the wicked.

AMERICAN NEWS IN ENGLAND.

Our English brethren are better informed than we, it seems, about sensational events in this country. The alert correspondent of The London Chronicle, for instance, on July 28 got a "beat" on all the American dailies by sending to London a cable dispatch which his paper thus summarized:

> A desperate strike riot is proceeding in America at Paint Creek, about twenty miles from Charleston.
>
> Some thousands of miners attacked a force of police with bombs, and the guardians of the mine premises retaliated with gatling guns and rifles. In the struggle twenty or thirty of the combatants on each side were killed. Among the victims are the Chief of the Police Force and a number of his men. The military have been sent for. Further trouble is feared, as the miners are starving.

THE TIMES did get wind of some of this news, which presaged, according to The Chronicle, "the most serious "labor conflict since the great Home-"stead riots in Pennsylvania," for we printed this item:

> CHARLESTON, West Va., July 26.—WILLIAM SPRINGER, a detective, and WILLIAM PHAUP, Chief of Detectives, coming down Paint Creek Road on a handcar, were fired upon by armed miners. SPRINGER was killed and PHAUP was seriously injured. The scene of the shooting was two miles below Mucklow.

In a riot at Mucklow, also, we gleaned the fact that "one miner was killed"; the shooting was "not done by miners "of the Paint Creek district, but by "foreign miners." The feeble shots of the embattled miners were heard round the world, and distance lent them sound and volume.

BREAD FOR THE EATER.

President FINLEY of the Southern Railway has been devoting a great deal of thought to the subject of agriculture and the best methods of increasing the productivity of the soil in the region of country reached by his lines. In a recent address at Atlantic City he spoke of the very serious problem now confronting the people of the United States, the problem of so increasing the products of the lands under cultivation that there shall be bread for the eater and seed for the sower. It cannot be solved by the old methods of farming, but must be reached by the very sure plan of better cultivation and higher fertilization. During the last census decade there was an increase of 21 per cent. in the population of the country, and to meet this largely increased power of consumption there was an increase of only 3.5 per cent. in the acreage devoted to cereal crops, and the aggregate production of cereals in 1909 was only 1.7 per cent. greater than in 1899. These figures partly explain the present high cost of living. The people are growing faster than the crops; the farmers are not making enough to feed the increasing millions of consumers.

According to the reports of the United States Department of Agriculture, the average yield of cotton to the acre for the ten years ended with the season of 1909 was 184.7 pounds. Under the instruction of the Cotton Culture Department of the Southern Railway, in many cases the yield of seed cotton was 1,425 pounds to the acre, as compared with 482 pounds on similar lands where such instruction was not followed. This was equivalent to nearly one bale of lint cotton to the acre, as compared with a little more than one-third of a bale produced by the old methods of farming.

What was accomplished in cotton could be as easily done in the food crops. The lands should be better prepared, should be fertilized intelligently and with the sort of fertilizers that will put back into the soil what the growing crops take out, and, this plan followed, the problem of feeding the multitude will be solved. "With a "larger number of farmers taking up "progressive methods," said Mr. FINLEY, "I believe that we shall, within "a relatively short period, see a sub-"stantial increase in soil productivity, "in average yields per acre, and in "aggregate production, which will "mean correspondingly increased pros-"perity for the farmer, larger sales "for the fertilizer manufacturer, a "greater volume of traffic for the rail-"way, and the prevention of an undue "advance in the cost of living."

TARIFF REFORM FUTILITIES.

The wool schedule which the President vetoed when it was passed last session has been passed again verbatim. Perhaps he will send it back with exactly the same veto. The only change in the situation is the report of the Tariff Board, but that alters nothing, not even opinions. Senator LA FOLLETTE himself says that no two men would necessarily reach the same conclusion from the report of the Tariff Board, and that it is impossible to figure from that report a schedule which would command everybody's assent.

The fault is less with the board's report than with the constant change in human affairs. Every time prices change, or there is a labor dispute, or countless things occur, the inferences from the board's report change also. Nothing is fixed but the law, and when other things alter, a good law becomes bad. The inference would seem to be that there ought to be a sliding schedule, as there is a sliding wage schedule in some industries. Pressed a little further, the inference would seem to be not that there should be no revision of the tariff, on account of the inability to frame one, but that there should be no tariff. At least the smaller the interference of Government with business the better. If left alone men of business would adapt themselves to the changes which so baffle legislators. They can do this better than the legislators because they have the means which legislators lack for controlling economic changes. Men of business can make their processes more efficient, or they can buy cheaper materials, or they can sell in a larger volume, or to better advantage in new markets, and so on in endless ways which legislators cannot control.

The long and short of it is that we must have a tariff, and cannot have a perfect tariff, and ought to stop the farce of passing tariffs which everybody knows will come to nothing. The President has his new veto prepared for him in the debate in the Senate yesterday. Congress has passed several wool tariffs which are not reconcilable with each other, or with any system of tariff reform. The greater the demonstration of the inconsistency of Congress the stronger the President and the weaker Congress. Why should Congress proceed with the demonstration to any greater length? Why not stop making faces at the President when the country merely laughs at Congress? It is true that the first wool bill should have been signed. It was not signed, and this bill will not be signed. The tariff cannot be reformed by this process.

At the risk of being catalogued among the false prophets foretold of these grand and awful times, we make bold to utter this prediction: THEODORE ROOSEVELT will be nominated for President of the United States by the Bull Moose Convention in Chicago today or to-morrow, or by the day after to-morrow at the latest, if the popular demand for seats shall continue good. This prophecy is made without any reservation whatsoever. Even if there should be an accident to the taxi which carries Imperial Caesar to his coronation, or some Brutus jealous of his country's good should strike down the Hope of the Ages, ere yet the heralds proclaim his greatest triumph, yet will he be named.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Distribution Costs Too Much. Just at this time the report of the committee headed by WILLIAM CHURCH OSBORN that has been trying to find out why it costs so much nowadays to live is not likely to receive all the attention it deserves. Yet nearly everybody who reads the report will feel a sharp twinge in the peculiarly sensitive nerve running to the pocketbook when he learns that though New York's food costs only $350,000,000 a year when it reaches the transportation terminals here, the price paid for it by consumers is $150,000,000 more. Of this increase, the committee thinks, at least $60,000,000 could be saved, and with no loss of profits to the retailers, simply by improving the methods of local distribution.

In the opinion of these investigators, relief is to be found, first, in the establishment of a Bureau of Markets, the chief function of which, apparently, would be the daily publication of accurate price lists of all food commodities, the prices to be fixed at public auctions supervised by the bureau. The second suggestion is that the distribution of food to consumers should be done by a few large dealers instead of by many small ones, thus avoiding the duplication of effort and facilities which at present, to the knowledge of all, adds enormously to the cost of living. The much-praised attempt to let the consumer deal directly with the producer seemingly does not much commend itself to the committee, presumably from disbelief in its practicability with social conditions as they are now.

As for these two recommendations, the second, as the report commits, is working itself out in exactly the direction the committee desires. In other words, the big shops are steadily getting bigger and doing more of the business, while the little fellows are slowly wearing themselves out in a competition which for them steadily grows harder and harder to meet. As to whether or not this is in all ways desirable is a question which, whether properly debatable or not, is sure to be debated. The Bureau of Markets might or might not work well, according to the character and competency of the men in it, but certainly the idea of making it easy for people to know the cost, as distinguished from the price, of food they buy is a good one.

Consoling Himself for Defeat. That genial exponent of English affection for the inhabitants of the United States, The Saturday Review, has been moved, of course, to characteristic utterance by the successes of the American athletes in Stockholm. They didn't do so very well there after all, it thinks, even as regards the number of points won, while as for the way these triumphs were achieved—that, in the opinion of The Saturday Review, made it one of England's glories that her score was low.

For Americans, it seems, "count it "shame to be second in any contest, and "only Americans count it gracious to win "as they understand winning." Ours, too, is always "the feminine wish"—"I "would I were invisible to catch the "strong fellow by the leg." From this use of quotation one learns that a wish becomes "feminine" because one woman made it, or was by a man imagined to have made it. When expressed, or if expressed, by an American athlete, it wouldn't be "masculine," but only "American," which is a fine specimen of Saturday Review consistency and logic.

What particularly excites The Review's rage is the fact that not a few London papers have been making the deplorable suggestion that there is a certain amount of humiliation in getting beaten, and that it would be well for the strong and swift men of Britain to go into hard training before attempting to meet champions gathered from all the rest of the world. "No doubt it is true," says The Review, "that we might have stood first instead "of third at Stockholm had we gone to "work as the professional American. "But our victory would have cost us all "that the English value in their sport. "The American idea of a game is serious business—and rather shady business, too."

Such talk as this used to cause anger over here, in an earlier and more sensitive era, but now it seems merely foolish or funny. That athletic victories cost more than they are worth is a contention that might be defended by several fairly good arguments. That, however, is not the position of this critic. He is growling simply because the English athletes can no longer defeat everybody, and because to regain their lost superiority they will have to change their methods of training and discipline—which would be a confession of present inferiority.

Purposing to Give Us Peace. If the ear doctors who have assembled in Boston this week as an international Congress of Otologists really accomplish their announced purpose of bringing about a decrease of noise in the world they will indeed deserve well of their fellow-men.

That a vast amount of unnecessary noise is made, especially in cities, is an indubitable fact, and though there may be found evidence of an abnormal or neurotic sensitiveness in some of the complaint which the ugly and useless sounds excite, they certainly are to a degree injurious to everybody, while for not a few people the harm they do is serious.

One cannot wholly agree, however, with one of the otological congressmen who says that noise indicates a wasting of energy. It often does that, to be sure, as when wagons go rumbling and crashing over an uneven pavement, but the statement is not always true, even of unnecessary noises, and the comparison of noise to the heating of machine bearings is not correct as regards many industrial operations. That these set a lot of air in motion to no profitable purpose, and so "waste" a part of the energy expended, cannot be denied, but this seems to be an inevitable part of these activities, while the hot bearing is a wholly different matter.

It is to the noises that are not either necessary or inevitable that the learned otologists should, and presumably will, devote their attention and condemnation. Even when thus limited, the field of reform will be an enormous one. We must get rid of the notion that loud noises and prosperity always go together and cannot be separated. Perfect silence and the opposite of prosperity are, indeed, close companions, even on a farm, but a great part of our urban clangors and clamors serve no end whatever except to irritate nerves and impair health. They do both, even for the people who create the noises and who resent and resist attempts to make them do their work and take their pleasure more quietly. In the ideal civilization, ears as well as eyes will be far better protected from assault than they are now.

A THRIFTY SCOTCHMAN

Complains of Carnegie's Woeful Waste of Postage Stamps.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Being engaged in some research work in which the various reports of the Carnegie Foundation would be useful, I applied at its office, 576 Fifth Avenue, for two of the same. The young lady in charge had no objection, she said, to sending the same by mail—the reports were heavy in mere avoirdupois as well as in their contents, an' me in puir health.

Now, in my opinion, there's naught like the thrift, mon; so I hastily considered that I would be me own postman, d'ye see, an' let the leddy gie me the stamps. But ne'er a wee bit wad she consent. She ga' me the "Medical Education in Europe," and mailed at the expense of exactly 30 cents the others. Sic a woful waste, an' me pairfectly willin' to airn 30 cents in these hard times. D'ye no think, Sir, she might ha' yielded to me importunity, an' if no, why no?

Honest Advertisements.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I should like to express my appreciation of THE TIMES's Want Department, a feature of your newspaper which I hold to be particularly praiseworthy. The rigid censorship in regard to misleading advertising which you have instituted and maintained is, I believe, the backbone of your success, and it is nowhere better illustrated than in your want columns. Your insistence upon a clear wording of the advertisements you publish is not only a protection but a liberal education for your patrons. The classification of the page is an evidence of attention to minute detail.

THE TIMES deserves much credit for making of its Want Department not a heterogeneous, unstable collection of chances, but a sound business proposition.

OTHER "THIRD PARTIES" HAVE HAD QUICK DEATHS

Some History for Bull Moose Followers to Study—Only Two Great Organizations Lived.

Anybody can run for President. Any group of men, however ill-assorted and by whatever name, can organize a political party and put their candidates in the field. Any company of cranks can magnify a theory, even an oft-exploded theory, into a fundamental doctrine and preach it for the saving of the Nation and the rights of man. All that is needed to make anything "go" is the psychological moment, and a sufficient number of unbalanced men to follow the shrewdest of their kind in his leading away from the established principles upon which good government is founded.

There have been Anti-Slavery Democrats, Abolition Democrats, Liberty-Abolition Democrats, Free-Soil Democrats, Free Silver Democrats, Gold Standard Democrats, Free Trade Democrats, and Protection Democrats—in spots, and all and singular of these have made formal declaration of their diverging "principles" at times and held political conventions to advance their respective beliefs. There have been Federalist, Whig, Liberal-Republican, Republican, Prohibition, Independent, National Greenback, Greenback National, Anti-Masonic, Anti-Monopoly, National People's, Middle-of-the-Road People's, plain People's, Silver, National, Know-Nothing, Constitutional Union, Radical Republican, Socialistic, Labor-Union, Liberal-Union, Woman's Suffrage, Social Democratic, Socialist Labor, Union Reform, and a score or two of other political parties, all of which have held conventions, adopted platforms, perfected organization, and spoken their sentiments freely. Nearly all of these parties have passed away; and, with the exception of the two great parties—the Democratic and Republican—those that survive are leading a very precarious existence. Impracticable and dangerous, however, as have been for the most part their proclamations, and fortunate as the country has been in escaping their domination, they have all left their scars upon the body politic and poisoned the headwaters. The evil they have done lives in the declarations of the two great parties, one of which at least, as it delights to boast, is the Party of the Constitution.

It is not altogether a bad thing that there should have been so many organizations, as they have acted as so many valves to let the steam of American sentiment escape without bursting the boiler; that is to say, it would not have been altogether bad if the adherents of the two great parties had only possessed a saving sense of the faith that was in them or to which they laid claim. For example, "the rising tide of Socialism," which Gov. Wilson has described as "not a programme but a protest against the present state of affairs in the United States," is the legitimate offspring of the protective system. Plain, ordinary, every-day men do not stop to reason. They have seen that under the protective system certain classes have been favored at the expense of the many, or, as the formula has it, "the rich have grown richer and the poor poorer," and they do not understand why the Government should not also do something for them, and in the same way or in a way that would enable them to enjoy some of the blessings of paternalism.

Then there is the demand of the Democratic Party for the free and independent coinage of silver at 16 to 1, and from this doctrine, or policy, the step is easy to the demand for fiat money. The vast expenditures of public money "demanded" by both of the old parties and voted for by their representatives in Congress for "public improvements" have served to encourage the discovery of still other public improvements for which still further vast expenditures might be voted with equal justification. If railroads, why not canals? If money for wetting arid lands in the West, why not money for drying wet lands in the South? If rivers and harbors, why not post roads? And so it goes. The people do not, cannot, differentiate between the things some of us think absolutely necessary to the public welfare and what others, and a very considerable part of the people, think would be profitable for them.

There have been political conventions almost without number, mass meetings at which formal resolutions were adopted and committees appointed to "carry out the purposes of this body," and since the first National convention was held in 1832 to nominate candidates for President and Vice President the people have been continuously "aroused to their danger and their duty." It is their fault if they have not fully applied all the teachings they have had and been unable to throw off many of the nostrums the political doctors have prescribed for their undone condition. Possibly the trouble is that those of us who know better have followed the bright lights that have led only into the wilderness of expediency, with the result that now it is the fashion of the day to say that the candidate is everything and the platform nothing; the man, not the "principles." It is curious how we have departed from the teachings of the fathers.

When Henry Clay was nominated for President by the National Republican Convention at Baltimore in 1832, the first resolve of the first platform ever issued by a National convention declared that "the time has come when nothing short of the united energies of all the friends of the American Republic can be relied on to sustain and perpetuate that hallowed work." It was further declared that the Supreme Court of the United States is the only tribunal recognized by the Constitution for deciding all questions arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States. We have got away from all that sort of thing now. The Constitution is held to be by many as an outworn instrument altogether unsuited to the business interests and the popular rights of this day. "The hallowed work" is still to be conserved, but conserved in a manner that will give greater "purchase" to those who cannot get along under a strict construction of the statutes. "The hallowed work" is all well enough in its place; but we have become a World Power, and the policies of the Swiss and the discarded theories of the ancients must be tried out here. If "the hallowed work" cannot stand the strain, so much the worse for "the hallowed work." That's all. At this Henry Clay convention it was further resolved that "the Senate of the United States is pre-eminently a conservative branch of the Federal Government; that upon a fearless and independent exercise of its constitutional functions depends the existence of the nicely balanced powers of that Government; and that all attempts to overawe its deliberations by the public press or by the National Executive deserve the indignant reprobation of every American citizen." Just as much now as then. Henry Clay was an old fogy, the people nowadays do not care anything about "nicely balanced powers," and the National Executive has been known to make and abrogate treaties, to interfere with the functions of the Senate by the advice of his legal representative. The old and well-established plan of doing things decently and in order was too slow for him, there was no sort of "life" and "ginger" in orderly procedure, and at last, the people largely agreeing, the Senators are to be chosen by direct elections; they are to represent the people hereafter and not the States, the State as the unit or entity is to be sacrificed on the altar of "the rule of the people," whether or not there are any people in the States to warrant any representation from them on a population basis.

⁂

It is a far cry from Tilden to Bryan. When the former was nominated for President in 1876, and elected so far as a clear majority of the votes of the people could at that time elect a President, the Democratic Party denounced the tariff as "a masterpiece of injustice, inequality, and false pretense," and demanded that "all Custom House taxation shall be only for revenue." It demanded, further, the establishment of a sound currency and denounced the failure of the Republican Party, then dominant in the affairs of the country, to make good the promise of the legal-tender notes which it declared to be "a changing standard of value." There was a vast, almost immeasurable distance between this declaration and the demand of the party made by Mr. Bryan twenty years later that "we are unalterably opposed to monometallism," that "the standard silver dollar shall be a full legal tender, equally with gold, for all debts, public and private," and that "until the money question is settled, (and settled, it should be noted, on a false basis and without the least regard to the interests of the United States as a commercial Nation,) we are opposed to any agitation for further changes in our tariff laws." In the same year (1896) Mr. Bryan was nominated for President by the People's Party on a platform declaring for free silver, the Government ownership of railroads and telegraph, and direct legislation through the initiative and referendum.

In the same year, Mr. Bryan was nominated by the Free Silver Party on a platform denouncing the gold standard and declaring for "a distinctively American financial system."

In the same year the National Party, of which the Rev. Charles E. Bentley was the candidate for President, demanded that "all money should be issued by the General Government only," for the free coinage of silver and the Government ownership of railroads, telegraph lines, and "other natural monopolies."

In the same year the Socialist-Labor Convention, because of "the perversion of Democracy to the ends of plutocracy," the exclusive right of the United States Government to issue money, "an efficient employers' liability law," the establishment of the referendum principle in all legislative measures, the direct vote in all elections, and the recall of all public officers by their respective constituencies.

⁂

Many of these declarations have since been made to masquerade as Democratic doctrines—Government ownership, direct elections of United States Senators, the initiative, referendum, and recall, and other insidious teachings—and been made the test of the right of free and independent citizens, who carry their sovereignty under their own hats, to take part in the affairs of the Democratic Party. It is almost equally bad in the Republican Party, so that although the new parties have come and gone they have left their scars and injected into the politics of the country issues that are destructive of the very warp and woof of our great American experiment in representative government.

Quiet, Thoughtful Bull Moose.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent to-day speaks of "absence of cheering multitudes, crowded hotel lobbies," &c., as an evidence of want of enthusiasm at the Chicago convention of Progressives. May not the reason be that in the old time of graft convention crowds, if Republican, were enthusiastic with the idea of pushing their hands further into Uncle Sam's pockets, or, if Democratic, of getting their chance at the same golden reservoir? It may not have been exactly a dishonest instinct, but that sort of thing was in the air and people knew no better.

Now that citizenship and statesmanship are being evolved out of the chaos, perhaps the feeling is deeper, if quieter, than that displayed in ordinary manifestations of bands, parades, and shoutings. Perhaps we are beginning to be grown men, not children.

Fearful of the Future.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note your editorial article, "Progress in Spite of Politics." I fail to understand your exultation over the prospect. Yes, it is true that a boom, or a wave of prosperity, as you please to call it, is impending. All the signs are here. Every one is looking forward to it. But why the joy? For the last few years, after the recovery from the 1907 panic, business has been normal and healthy. But we are restless and dissatisfied. Soon we shall have prosperity—more enterprises, more booms, more excitement, more speculation. Everything will be done, everything will be overdone. How long will this last? Two years, three years, maybe. And then, what? Too much excitement, too much luxury, too much speculation, and the final crash—a panic greater than we have seen in a generation. So why exult? Why not grow more sober, so the better to meet the inevitable result?

TRUE DEMOCRACY.

Now is the season of our discontent;
For every politician through the land
Shows, by the path on which our steps are bent,
The dangers looming large, on either hand.
Perhaps we think our country's like to flourish,
Its prospects look so bright—but no, indeed!
Behold the nest of vipers that we nourish,
The hideous offspring of predacious greed!
Unless we heed each prophet's exhortation,
The land for which our fathers fought and bled
Will presently be damned, beyond salvation—
Freedom deposed and slavery crowned instead!
His is the only party, bent on curbing
The depredations of raptorial man;
And all the rest—this thought is most disturbing—
Will share the plunder with him, if they can.
He tells us in a voice of pealing thunder
The people are defrauded of their rights—
Since we are wronged like this, 'tis little wonder
If some of us can scarcely sleep o' nights.
Yet there are some who fail to get excited—
"Saving the country" seems to them a bore—
By all these bugaboos they're not affrighted;
They've seen the same old bogies oft before.
They now believe that under either party
Our institutions somehow will persist;
And are prepared to give allegiance hearty
To any President the people list.
What though he fails to meet their approbation?
They're bound to make the best of him they can;
And, after all, the judgment of the Nation
Is sounder, far, than that of any man.

'HANKY PANKY' HAS VERY FUNNY WOMAN

She Is Florence Moore, Late of the Vaudevilles, and Entertainment's Bright Particular Star.

A GOOD POPULAR SHOW

Old Stuff and New in a Pleasant Jumble with Enough Color, Go, and Girls.

HANKY PANKY, a musical comedy in two acts, by Edgar Smith; lyrics by E. Ray Goetz, music by A. Baldwin Sloane. Broadway Theatre.

Cutie Wriggle	Flo May
Dopie Wriggle	Myrtle Gilbert
Iona Carr	Virginia Evans
Ponsonby	Byrd Goolsby
Sir J. Rufus Wallingford	Hugh Cameron
Herman Bierheister	Bobby North
Wilhelm Rausmitt	Max Rogers
Solomon Bumpski	Harry Cooper
Clorinda Scribblem	Florence Moore
Blackie Daw	Carter De Haven
Cleopatra	Christine Nielsen
Dustin, Blackie's footman	Philip Sohlke
Hiney Rausmitt	William Montgomery
Harry Manleigh	Hugh Cameron

The distinguishing feature of last night's new musical mélange at the Broadway Theatre was provided by a remarkably clever young woman, Miss Florence Moore, who, from being fairly well known in the vaudevilles, promises to become a habit with the people who patronize the more extended form of entertainment. In reality there isn't so much difference between the two, or, rather, the difference is often one of quantity rather than of quality.

But Miss Moore has the staying qualities. She began being funny as soon as she appeared in the first act, and later on she ended by being so excruciatingly funny that she quite dwarfed all of the other performers.

In the twenty minutes or so in which she and her amusing partner, William Montgomery, held the stage there was something doing all the time, the something being generally of an unexpected sort, and always amusing. Whereupon, it appears time to mention that the reason for this lies in the fact that Miss Florence Moore, besides having the personality that can adapt itself to a humorous suggestion, seems also to have a sense of humor of her own. In fact, compared with the three or four allegedly humorous gentlemen who spoke broken English of a kind that was so obviously fractured to order that it could never have actually occurred (a difference by the way, between what most of these people hand out and what Joe Weber and Lew Fields exploit)—well, compared with these people Miss Moore was a whole entertainment in herself. For she has versatility, does not constantly harp on the same old idea of fun, and gives that pleasant suggestion of spontaneity which is so desirable and so rare.

It will be worth anybody's while going to the Broadway if merely to hear from this gifted young woman the difference between recitations with and without gesture. Incidentally anybody who has a grouch to get rid of may feel reasonably sure of feeling better after a succession of the college yell stuff which Miss Moore and Mr. Montgomery provide.

But though comparisons may sometimes be odious, it is not to say that "Hanky Panky," as it goes, is not a good entertainment of its kind. Things there are in it, and many of them, of the kind that "always were good." Indeed, the point of repetition went so far last night that at least one whole passage familiarized by Weber and Field on this very stage only a few months since was handed out again almost verbatim. But not all the patrons of a musical show are captious; not all of them are regular first-nighters. So howls of laughter sometimes greet the things that to many of us were merely friends of long ago.

There are novelties enough in the show, however, to entertain even the regular guard, with some very agreeable tunes very pleasantly sung and with some very pretty faces and some human lines very gracefully displayed. The dances arranged by Gus Sohlke are pleasant to watch, and the general effect, barring the somewhat overprolonged efforts of the dialect comedians, is pleasing to both eye and ear.

One of the prettiest numbers, early in the first act, is "Tennis," nicely sung and danced by two younger principals, Miss Gilbert and Miss May, and introducing the chorus in a ball-batting specialty reminiscent of "Girlies," but similarly pleasing to those people out front who like to feel that they are helping things along. Very charming, too—possibly the most "hummable" tune in the piece—is "Where the Edelweiss is Blooming." Then, for volume and go, there is a ragtime version of the "Lucia" sextet, with Miss Nilsson and Mr. Cooper lending good voice to the general effect. And very pretty, too, is "The Lyre Bird and the Jay," with the nimble and effecient Mr. Carter De Haven providing one figure, while Miss Myrtle Gilbert supplies the other. Miss Gilbert, a comparative newcomer among principals, is a piquant little beauty, graceful, lively, and charming. "Hanky Panky," then, is, as it stands, a good evening's entertainment in itself, and Miss Moore, as aforesaid, ought to be a magnet for some time to come.

Thieves Take E. H. Sothern's Wigs.

Thieves entered the Sothern and Marlowe storehouse at 228 West Thirtieth Street(sometime Sunday and carried away many valuable stage properties and Shakespearean wardrobe. When Frederick Kaufman, stage manager for Sothern and Marlowe, opened the warehouse yesterday morning he discovered that all of the wardrobe trunks had been broken open and many valuable articles were missing. The thieves took the trunk containing E. H. Sothern's collection of wigs, that cannot be replaced without considerable labor. The Sothern and Marlowe season will begin at Scranton, Penn., on Sept. 16.

Bessie Abott Appears in 'Robin Hood'

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 5.—Bessie Abott, the American grand opera prima donna, made her début in light opera at the Opollo Theatre to-night as Maid Marian in the De Koven Opera Company's production of "Robin Hood," which goes from here to the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York. Others in the cast with Miss Abott were Florence Wyckham, Walter Hyde, Edwin Stevens, Pauline Hall, George Frothingham, Carl Gantvoort, and Herbert Watrous. One of the largest audiences ever gathered in the Apollo Theatre gave Miss Abott an enthusiastic welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Weber Go to Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Weber will leave to-morrow for a fifteen-day trip through the Berkshires and the White Mountains, to spend part of the time fishing. On their return Mr. Weber will begin work with Lew Fields on the rehearsals of Graham Moffatt's "A Scrape o' the Pen" and "The June Bride," and also give attention to the formation of the new Weber and Fields company that is to open the new Weber and Fields Music Hall in West Forty-fourth Street in the Fall.

Mrs. Fiske Back from Europe.

Mrs. Fiske returned yesterday from a three months' holiday in Europe, on the Red Star liner Lapland, and said that she felt much benefited by the rest. She has a new and as yet unnamed play by Edward Sheldon, the author of "Salvation Nell," which she expects to produce soon.

Music in the Parks.

MRS. BEACH NURSE AND BRIDE

Divorcee Weds Lieut. Cornwall After His Recovery from Typhoid.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 5. — The wedding of Lieut. Frank Stanley Cornwall of this city and Mrs. Marola Beach of Waterbury this afternoon, although delayed for several weeks, was held as soon as the recovery from typhoid fever of the bridegroom was assured. He was taken ill and was nursed at the Woodmont cottage of Mrs. Beach, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Anderson, formerly member of the Yale Corporation.

The witnesses were the two children of Mrs. Beach and Mrs. Frederick Yates of New York City, sister of Lieut. Cornwall, who has assisted the bride nurse him through his illness.

Mrs. Beach was divorced from her husband, Edward H. Beach of Waterbury, several weeks ago, receiving large alimony and being awarded the custody of their two children. Owing to the social and business prominence of her husband, who is President of the Manufacturers' Foundry Association of Waterbury, none of the evidence in the case was made public.

Immediately after the award of the decree Mrs. Beach went to her cottage at Woodmont, where she was joined by Lieut. Cornwall, who is commander. of the New Haven division naval battalion. He is secretary of a large New Haven manufacturing concern.

JOURNEYING TO PUTUMAYO.

State Department's Investigator Begins Long Trip Up the Amazon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Stuart Fuller, the State Department's agent sent to investigate the atrocities in the Putumayo rubber country of Peru, started to-day with the British Consul at Iquitos for the headwaters of the Amazon, where he will establish a base for his operations.

Mr. Fuller will proceed by a light draft stern-wheel steamer as far up the Amazon, perhaps, as the mouth of its tributary, the Putumayo, and at that point the party will be obliged to take small power launches. Even these must be abandoned in the upper reaches of the Putumayo, and the party must traverse long distances afoot in the jungle. Altogether, the voyage up the river will extend about 2,000 miles.

Mr. Fuller will not be long out of touch with the outside world. The Peruvian Government has erected some powerful wireless telegraph stations in the rubber country, which are capable of establishing communication over the Andes to Lima.

It has been suggested that a question as to the ownership of the territory in which the rubber fields are located may offer some difficulties to the negotiations for the oppression of the atrocities. Brazil, Chile, and Peru once disputed part of the tract, but that has been adjusted. Colombia, however, is said to feel that she has an ancient title to the property, basing it on the contention that under the name of New Granada her title ran to all the present territory of Ecuador, Venezuela, and Peru.

The State Department, however, is concerned only with the allegations of torture of the natives.

County Clerk Warns Lawyers.

County Clerk William F. Schneider has warned members of the bar against persons who say they are employes of the County Clerk's office and members of a so-called civil employers' association, who are soliciting advertisements for an advertising journal. No employe of his office has solicited such advertisements and he requests that, when members of the bar are approached for such advertisements, he be immediately notified over the telephone and the person held for investigation.

Auto Truck Kills a Boy.

Nathan Deitschman, 9 years old, of 76 Chrystie Street, while playing Wild West with a number of companions in front of 69 Chrystie Street last night, ran in front of an approaching auto truck owned by Peck & Hillis of Thirty-fourth Street, and Third Avenue, Brooklyn, and was knocked down, the wheels passing over and killing him instantly. Patrolman Morschauser questioned several witnesses of the accident, and ascertained that the chauffeur, Thomas Sinclair of Bay Thirteenth and Sixty-eighth Streets, Bath Beach, was not at fault, allowed the chauffeur to go.

Ex-Senator Smith Gives a Dinner.

Ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, N. J., gave a dinner last night at his Summer home, Garfield Cottage, Elberon, N. J. Among his guests were Cardinal Farley of New York, Bishop John J. O'Connor of Newark, Bishop James A. McFaul of Trenton, and Bishop John J. Hennessy of Wichita, Kan.

FARCICAL SCENES IN 'MONTMARTRE GIRL'

Richard Carle and Miss Williams Well Received in Piece of Usual French Type.

MISTAKEN - IDENTITY PLOT

The Music Is Catchy—Motion Kinemacolor Picture Showing Pursuit of Characters a Novel Feature.

THE GIRL FROM MONTMARTRE, a farce with music, in three acts, American version by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith. Music by Henry Bereney. Criterion Theatre.

Dr. Petypon	Richard Carle
Gabrielle	Marion Abbott
Dr. Brumage	William Danforth
Gen. Petypon	Al Hart
Clementine	Moya Mannering
Lieut. Corignon	George Lydecker
Andre	Alan Mudie
Duchess de Valmonte	Bertha Holly
Loulou	Lenox Pawle
Abbe	Percy F. Leach
Mme. Sauverel	Mercita Esmond
Mme. Hautignol	Louise Donovan
Mme. de Claux	Dai Turgeon
Mme. Vautier	Leia Lee
Mme. Veron	Hazel Troutman
Mme. King	Clara Eckstrom
Baroness de Granelle	Mary Gilmore
Baron de Granelle	George T. Chance
Mons. Sauverel	John Hamilton
Mme. Ottalie	Alice Carrington
Etienne	Ralph Nairn
Footman	George R. Lynch
Praline	Hattie Williams

Richard Carle and Hattie Williams made their first appearance as joint stars at the Criterion Theatre last night in "The Girl from Montmartre," a three-act farce with music. Several of the musical numbers were extremely well received, and Mr. Carle and Miss Williams had a hearty welcome from the first-night audience. The piece is of the usual German-French type, with the complications due to some cases of mistaken identity and the lively nature of a mature husband with a homely wife. The American version is by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith and the music by Henry Bereny, while the original book is credited to Georges Feydeau and Rudolph Schanzer.

Dr. Petypon, the mature husband, comes home from the Café Montmartre and goes to sleep under a sofa in the parlor, putting Praline, the girl, into his room. His wife mistakes her for a spirit and the doctor's uncle mistakes her for his niece and invites her to the betrothal of another niece, Clementine, to Lieut. Corignon, whom Praline loves. After two acts and a half of the customary farcical situations, interspersed with some chorus numbers and solos and some of Mr. Carle's peculiar dances, the various lovers are paired according to their desires. A novel feature in the last act is a motion picture in Kinemacolor of the pursuit by the various characters of Praline.

Mr. Carle had the rôle of the Doctor and Miss Williams played the part of Praline. Moya Mannering was seen as Clementine, and had several dances with Alan Mudie as her sweetheart André. Lennox Pawle was lost in a very small rôle of a half-witted youthful Duke. William Danforth played a doctor, companion in crime to Petypon. Two special dances were introduced by Joe Smith in the second and third acts. The music generally is catchy and well sung.

STAGE LABOR WAR IS OVER.

Musicians and Stage Hands Enter Into Agreements with Managers.

The differences between the theatre managers and producers and the musicians' and the stage hands' unions were settled yesterday by formal agreements entered into among the various parties concerned. Concessions were made by both sides in the disputes, and both sides are satisfied with the results of the conferences that have been held during the last two weeks.

The arrangements for the coming season, so far as the musicians' union is concerned, have been published. The stage hands have agreed to a modification of their demands, so that they now waive the demand for a full season contract and ask only for a two weeks' notice clause in their contracts. They further agree to accept a contract permitting immediate dismissal for incompetency, dishonesty, drunkenness, or failure to obey the rules of the employer.

A manager producing a play for a run at a theatre is to be permitted to take the house crew on the road for a period of not more than four weeks in order to prepare the production for presentation in New York. A separate agreement has been entered into by which the stage employes agree to submit to arbitration any claim that the manager may have under their contract with the International Alliance of Stage Employes' members.

AMES GETS SHAW COMEDY.

"Fanny's First Play" to be Opening Bill at Little Theatre Sept. 16.

Winthrop Ames announced last night that he had obtained the rights to George Bernard Shaw's play, "Fanny's First Play," the American rights of which are controlled by the Shuberts, and would make it the opening bill at the Little Theatre on Sept. 16. Granville Barker, the English manager, will bring over his London companw that has been appearing in the comedy for more than a year.

"Fanny's First Play" was produced anonymously, but the authorship was discovered before the first night was over. Mr. Barker, it will be remembered, was at one time considered for the directorship of the late New Theatre, in New York.

Ivan Caryll Here for Rehearsals.

Ivan Caryll, the composer of many comic operas for the Gaiety Theatre, London, arrived here yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika to attend the rehearsals of two of his new musical comedies which are to be produced in this country by Klaw & Erlanger. "Her Left Shoulder" will be staged in October and "Le Petit Café" in March, Mr. Caryll said.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Frank Losee has been engaged by the George C. Tyler Company to play the role of Dr. Moses Oppenheimer in the new H. B. Warner comedy, "Buxi," which is to open at the Hudson Theatre on Sept. 5.

Harris & Selwyn announced yesterday that their initial production of the season will be a new Chinese play called "The Yellow Jacket," by George Hazelton and Harry Benrimo. The play will be produced in October.

Mary Servoss has been added to the company that is now rehearsing "The Master of the House" that is to open at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre. She will play the daughter of the man who divorces his wife and forsakes his family in order to marry an adventuress.

Douglas Fairbanks will have the role of Travers Gladwin in "Officer 666" when that farce resumes its run at the Gaiety Theatre next Monday evening. Mr. Fairbanks played the role in the special company that Cohan & Harris sent to Chicago last February. Mr. Fairbanks will continue in this part until he begins rehearsals of J. B. Fagan's play, "Hawthorne, U. S. A.," in which he is to be starred.

Gustav Luders returned from Europe on the George Washington yesterday, bringing with him the score for a new operetta, "The Gypsy," which he has composed for a book by Frank Pixley, and the score for "Somewhere Else," a new operetta by Avery Hopwood, which is to be produced by Henry W. Savage.

HOSPITAL APPEALS FOR AID.

New Clinic and Dispensary Needed for Institution for the Deformed.

The Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, 1,915 Madison Avenue, of which Emanuel M. Gattle is President, will build a new clinic and dispensary annex from plans made by Max G. Heidelberg. It is intended to erect later on a general hospital building on a site adjoining the present institution. The charity is non-sectarian. Among the improvements planned is an operating theatre with a novel artificial system of lighting. The hospital has the largest clinic of its kind in the world, and is the only hospital that takes adult patients with chronic joint diseases, congenital and acquired. Last year 29,322 cases came under the observation of the hospital physicians.

The clinical attendance is now between 150 and 200 daily, making it the largest orthopedic clinic in the world. It also creates such a demand for the proper facilities that the Board of Directors realize the recent statement of Dr. Jacobi at the annual meeting, that they must either find a proper space for the adequate treatment of their cases, or else close their doors, and they have appealed to the public for aid in completing and equipping their new building.

Militant Male Suffragist to Speak.

An English "man-suffragette" will be the speaker preceding the Equal Franchise Society dance at the library of the association, 8 East Thirty-seventh Street, this evening. The man, whose name is not given, is said to have been in the thick of the militant movement. He will speak on the "Men's Militant Suffrage movement," a subject that has never been discussed in this country.

TO STAGE TWO PLAYS FOR JUDGE'S VERDICT

Belasco Says He Will Prove That "The Woman" Was Not Plagiarized

AND WILL PAY THE BILL

Suing Dramatist Is Charged in Court with Having Put Seven Murders in a Single Drama.

For the purpose of deciding whether or not the play "The Woman" was plagiarized, as alleged, from another and as yet unproduced play, Judge Holt of the Federal Court will have both plays staged for his special benefit in the Belasco Theatre, and after witnessing them he will give his decision. This novel proposition was made while the hearing was in progress yesterday before Commissioner Gilchrist by David Belasco and was accepted by the attorneys for the plaintiff, Abraham Goldknoff. Judge Holt agreed to the proposition, remarking:

"I believe it was the King of Bavaria who was accustomed to having plays presented for his judgment. Yes, I will witness the plays; that would be very much better than reading the manuscripts of the plays."

Mr. Belasco then said:

"I am willing to go to the expense of staging the two plays as an object lesson to the public, showing how much trouble managers may be caused by claimants of our work, and in the hope that thereby this trouble may be stopped."

The two productions before Judge Holt will be presented on the same day, probably a matinée and evening performance, Mr. Belasco said, during the first week in October. In addition to the interested parties and their corps of experts, invitations will be issued to others to attend the performances, but no tickets will be sold to the public. In the meantime Judge Holt will read typewritten copies of the plays.

Before the hearing was brought to an abrupt end by Judge Holt consenting to public performances of the two plays, Mr. Belasco and Mr. Goldknoff practically took the case out of the hands of their attorneys by rising and facing each other across the big table in the examination room and arguing the merits and demerits of their claims.

"You're a crazy dramatist!" shouted Mr. Belasco, pointing his finger dramatically at his small antagonist, while Judge Dittenhoefer, counsel for Belasco, begged him to be quiet and tried pressure on his arm to induce him to take his seat. But Mr. Belasco was determined and angry, and shaking off the interfering arm, continued:

"How many murders have you got in your play? How many deaths are there? Seven!"

"No, no; you haven't read the play properly," protested Goldknoff.

"Sit down," said the latter's attorney, Adolph Freyer, tugging at the tails of the plaintiff's coat.

Mr. Belasco went on:

"There is no more similarity between the plays than an elephant's ear and your mouth. It's a conspiracy, and I defy any one to show that the plays are alike. Who is paying for this? This man is poor and you ought to take up a subscription for him. Why did Mr. Klein get out of this case after he first appeared as counsel for the plaintiff? This plaintiff's play is no more like De Mille's play, 'The Woman,' than Shakespeare's 'Hamlet' is like a sewing machine." Then Belasco closed with his offer to produce both plays for impartial judgment.

"You should provide us with equally as good actors for our play," insisted Attorney Freyer on behalf of Goldknoff."

"Your play will need better actors," retorted Max D. Josephson, counsel for William C. De Mille. Belasco declared he would spend $2,000, if necessary, to prove that his play had not been plagiarized in any part.

"Now I suppose he will be happy," said Mr. Belasco. "He is going to have his play produced."

William C. De Mille, author of "The Woman," was examined as to his work in composing the play and the time when he first began it. He said he talked over the subject with Mr. Belasco in January, 1908, and commenced the work shortly afterward. He said he had never heard of the play of Goldknoff's until he received word from an attorney in the case. Mr. De Mille said he had read the play before some friends and members of his family on Aug. 15, 1908. His hearers included, he said, Prof. John Erskine of Columbia University, John C. De Mille, his uncle, and later to William J. Dean of the Lambs. Goldknoff copyrighted his play Sept. 12, 1910.

McNAMARA SERVANTS GONE.

Taken Back to San Francisco for Trial—Banker's Wife Goes, Too.

The writs of habeas corpus issued for Mrs. Clare Perkins and Fred Patterson, who were arrested at the Hotel Knickerbocker on the charge of stealing the automobile of Nicholas J. McNamara, a San Francisco banker, are to be withdrawn. Supreme Court Justice Lehman adjourned the arguments yesterday for a week, but later in the day officers armed with requisition papers arrived from San Francisco and the prisoners are now on their way to meet trial in California, thus invalidating the writs sworn out for them here.

Fred Patterson and Mrs. Perkins were, respectively, the housekeeper and the chauffeur of the San Francisco banker. Last month they started eastward in his automobile, together with Mrs. Margaret McNamara, his wife, and her two children. The banker traced them on their journey, and they were immediately held without bail on their arrival in New York.

Mrs. McNamara and her children, it was learned, are also on their way back to their home in San Francisco.

WEEK'S BILLS AT THEATRES.

Beatrice Morgan appeared with the Corse Payton Stock Company at the West End Theatre yesterday in Clyde Fitch's drama, "The Woman in the Case."

The Manhattan Opera House reopened last night with the Manhattan Stock Company in "Wildfire," with Miss Dallas Tyler and Richard Gordon in the leading roles.

Kate Elinore and Sam Williams headed the bill at Keith's Union Square Theatre, and others on the programme were Joseph Howard and Mabel McCane, Jack Gardner, Lida McMillan and company, Bert Kalmar and Jessie Brown, Mary Barley, the Cabaret Trio, the Jordon Trio, and Juggling De Lisle.

At Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Ruth Chatterton made her vaudeville debut in a comedy called "Susan's Gentleman," and among the other entertainers were Fanny Brice, Minerva Coverdale and George White, the Eight English Roses, Sully and Hussy, Bobby Barry and company, Phil Staats, Lillian Ashley, and Lydia and Albino.

A "Salome" dance with Aida Overton Walker was the feature at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, and the rest of the programme included Houdini, Don the talking dog, Frank Morrell, Martinetti and Sylvester, Fields and Carroll, the Three Ernests, the Arlington Four, Mae West, the Five Frazers, Edgar Berger, Chalk Saunders, and Lauder and Scott.

Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth again headed the bill at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, and others who appeared were Willard Sims, the Six Kellermanns, Mack Williams and Iva Segal, and Hayden, Borden and Hayden.

At the New Brighton Theatre, Brighton Beach, Louis A. Simon and Kathryn Osterman in "A Persian Garden" were headliners, and included in the rest of the programme were Joe Welch in "In 1999," Winsor McCay, Arthur Deagon, Mosher, Hayes and Mosher, Linden Beckwith, and the Flying Martins.

The vaudeville bill at the rustic theatre at Palisades Amusement Park yesterday consisted of the American Comedy Four, Georgalas Brothers, Kaiser's dogs, Bob Warren, Teddy Dupont, Wilson and Rich, and Ralph Woods and sister.

A ROTHSCHILD ENGAGEMENT.

L. N. de Rothschild, M. P., to Marry Mlle. Louise Beer of Paris.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The engagement is announced of Lionel Nathan de Rothschild, M. P., and Marie Louise, youngest daughter of Edmond Beer of Paris and sister of Baroness Robert de Rothschild. The engagement adds another to a long series of alliances between the Beers and Rothschilds.

Mlle. Beer is a descendant of the composer Meyerbeer. Her aunt, Mme. Guillaume Beer, is known in Paris literary circles under the nom de plume of "Jean Dornis."

Edmond Beer conducts a large banking business in association with his brother Guillaume.

FRIENDLY SUIT ON ELY WILL.

Executor Contends Personal Estate Is Insufficient to Pay Legacies.

A friendly suit was begun yesterday in the Supreme Court for the judicial construction of the will of Smith Ely, a former Mayor of New York, who died in 1911, leaving an estate of nearly $1,000,000.

The suit is being instituted by Cheever N. Ely, an executor under the will, who states that the other executors, George B. Vanderpoel and Ambrose E. Vanderpoel have refused to join him in the application. By Mr. Ely's will, large sums were bequeathed to religious and nonsectarian charities, among them the American Sunday School and the United Charities, and to his old family servants. The residuary estate was to be divided among his relatives.

Cheever N. Ely contends that Mr. Ely's personal estate is insufficient to pay the legatees in full, and that many of the legacies will become a charge on certain of the testator's real estate holdings which were not specifically disposed of in the will.

It is further stated that none of the legacies, personal or charitable, has as yet been paid.

MRS. TAFT'S FATHER DEAD.

J. W. Herron Was Once Prominent Lawyer—President Goes to Funeral.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 5.—John W. Herron, father of Mrs. William H. Taft, wife of the President, died at his home here early to-day after an illness of several years. He was 85 years old. Mr. Herron was for many years one of Cincinnati's most prominent attorneys, and was United States District Attorney under President Harrison.

Mr. Herron was born in Shippensburg, Penn., in 1827. He attended Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, graduating there in 1844, and later was President of the Board of Trustees. In 1854 he married Harriet Collins, daughter of Isaac Collins, with whom he formed his first law partnership. Mr. Herron survived his wife ten years, her death occurring in 1902. Besides Mrs. Taft, there are seven other children.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The President and Mrs. Taft, Charles, their younger son, and W. C. Herron, a brother of Mrs. Taft, left Washington at 6:45 o'clock to-night over the Pennsylvania Railroad for Cincinnati to attend the funeral of John W. Herron, Mrs. Taft's father. The President will return to Washington early Thursday, but Mrs. Taft may remain in Cincinnati several days.

PROF. E. L. RICHARDS DEAD.

Emeritus Professor of Mathematics at Yale Was 74 Years Old.

BEACH HAVEN, N. J., Aug. 5.—Prof. Eugene Lamb Richards, Emeritus Professor of Mathematics of Yale University, former director of the Yale Gymnasium, and author, died here to-day at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Locke, his death having been due to senile infirmities.

Prof. Richards was born in Brooklyn Dec. 27, 1838, the son of Timothy P. and Agnes Trent (Lamb) Richards. He was graduated from Yale in 1860 and received his Master's degree from that institution in 1887. He was tutor of mathematics at Yale from 1868 to 1871, Assistant Professor from 1871 to 1891, and Professor of Mathematics from 1891 to 1906, when he became Professor Emeritus.

Prof. Richards was married in 1861 to Miss Julia L. Bacon of New Haven, Conn.

J. H. Schaeffer, Engineer, Found Dead

John Henry Schaeffer, for twenty-nine years Assistant Engineer in the Topographical Bureau of the Bronx, was found dead in his home at 1,805 Clinton Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday by the janitress, Mrs. Sarah Klempt, and Policeman Donnelly of the Tremont Station. He was fully dressed and seated at the dining room table. Mr. Schaeffer had been dead since Saturday night, it is believed. He owned his home, a five-story brownstone structure. Mr. Schaeffer had been living there with his sister, Miss Alice Schaeffer, who is now in Copenhagen, Denmark, visiting friends.

John Tweedy.

DANBURY, Conn., Aug. 5.—John Tweedy, 69 years old, who was Postmaster at Danbury 16 years, died to-day in Norwich, where he had been under medical treatment several weeks. Mr. Tweedy was on the staff of Gov. Marshall Jewell in 1871, and was a former member of the General Assembly. Recently he published a book, containing a record of the proceedings of National Conventions since the formation of the Republican Party.

Hits—Off Marquard, 5 in 1 1-3 innings, (at bat 10;) off Ames, 8 in 7 2-3 innings, (at bat 27.) Umpires—Messrs. Owens and Brennan. Time of game—Two hours and two minutes.

The Giants suffered a hard blow yesterday, because, while the Pittsburghs were defeating them at the Polo Grounds by a score of 8 to 4, the rejuvenated Chicago team beat the Phillies twice, and New York dropped back two games, their margin in the National League race on this fine August morning being eight games. When the Giants, with a lead of ten games, begin to slip back at the rate of two games a day, there is reason for reflection.

The painful part of yesterday's game at the Brush Stadium was the dethroning of Rube Marquard in the second inning. The Pirates, wrought up to a high pitch of batting ability, drove the talented Rube from the mound just as if he were an ordinary pitcher. Ames relieved the Rube in the second inning, when the fusillade became so hot that it scorched the star southpaw. Ames did pretty well except in the sixth inning, when the Pirates added a couple more runs, not through necessity, but just to be sure of the win.

Claude Hendrix was the Pittsburgh citizen who tamed the Giants. He held McGraw's ambitious batsmen to seven hits, and by his elusive twists nine of the Giants struck out. Hendrix was never in serious trouble. He always held the whip hand and pitched himself out of difficulties with the confidence of a master.

The man who took the heart out of Marquard was Hans Wagner, a Teuton with considerable reputation as a ball player. Wagner, they say, is getting old and infirm, and that the only position left in life for him is to be night watchman of a National bank. Wagner may be old and tottering, but no one can tell that to Rube Marquard, because Rube will not believe it. Rube knows better.

In the first inning of yesterday's game, when everything looked rosy for the Giants and two Pittsburgh athletes were out, Mr. Wagner picked up a stick and limped to the plate. Marquard smiled at the old man benevolently. How great was once the mighty Wagner. And look at him to-day, thought Rube, only a shadow of his former greatness.

Poor old Hans! All the time Marquard was smiling at him Wagner was taking a firmer grip on his bat. He swung wide and he swung hard, and he swung like he did a dozen years ago. The bat caught the ball right in the middle and the ball went soaring into the azure in left field. On and on it floated, like a bird in its flight, and fell among the fans in the left field bleachers, while Wagner made the circuit of the bases, sending in Mike Donlin ahead of him.

Marquard's attitude toward the Pittsburgh team changed right then and there. The 8,000 and more spectators who neglected their duties on Monday afternoon to see Marquard scare the Buccaneers changed their attitudes also, and Hans Wagner once more became a figure in baseball to be respected. He hadn't grown so old after all, had he? There are still a few home runs left in the aged party.

Marquard began the second inning with Wagner's greatness impressed on his mind. His cunning was gone, and the mystery which usually surrounds his pitching was missing. McCarthy, who faced Marquard in the second inning, caught hold of one of Rube's curves and sent it on a screaming career into deep left field for three bases. Gibson fouled to Meyers, and Hendrix struck out, but got safely to first when the Indian chief let the ball roll past him.

Byrne hit the ball to an uninhabited part of centre field, and McCarthy scored. Carey did exactly the same thing, and Hendrix scored, and then, yes, right then, who appears on the horizon but Michael Donlin, one time a resident of this town! Michael completely forgot his local connections and the fondness he once held for Manhattan, so he smashed the ball unceremoniously to left field, scoring Byrne and Carey.

Sad as it is to relate, here is the point where Marquard parades to the clubhouse. There was a touch of sadness to the procession as the Rube picked up his glove and with bowed head marched silently away. For the first time in a long, long time he heard the cry, "Take him out." That remark hasn't been hurled at Marquard for a couple of seasons, but he heard it yesterday.

Leon Ames came to the rescue. Wagner didn't scare Mr. Ames, for the Dutchman forced Donlin at second and Miller struck out.

The first Giant run came in the fourth inning, on Murray's triple and Herzog's single. In the fifth Snodgrass was hit and Doyle walked, and while Becker was forcing Doyle at second Snodgrass scored. In the sixth Gibson tripled to right field, and scored on a wild pitch. Byrne hit safely, and was forced by Carey. Carey stole second base, and scored on Donlin's single.

The Giants added two forlorn runs in the ninth. With two out, Snodgrass doubled to centre, and scored when Donlin muffed Doyle's fly. Doyle stole second base and scored on Becker's single.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 5.—The Tigers hit with runners on bases to-day, and won, 4 to 2. The Yankees got their first man on base in the first, third, fifth, sixth, and eighth innings, and the second man in the seventh, but only in the first could they go through with what they started.

The Yanks furnished nearly all the fielding worth looking at, Hal Chase and Daniels doing particularly commendable things. Hal went out along the right field foul line in the fourth inning and gathered in a Texas Leaguer from Mullin's bat which looked so safe that Stanage, starting from first, had turned second base when Chase grabbed the ball, and Stanage was the victim of the easiest kind of a double play. In the seventh inning he went over to the end of the visiting players' dugout and took down a Crawford foul, ending what threatened to be a Tiger clean-up.

Daniels's contribution to the high-class fielding was a sprinting catch in the third which robbed Moriarty of a hit and kept Bush from scoring.

Donie Bush started something that would have been a triple play except for the fact that one batsman already was out. It was in the fifth inning. Martin walked, and hiked along on McConnell's hit to right field, after Sweeney had fouled. Daniels sent a cannon shot directly at Bush, who clung to it. Martin had started for third, so Bush tossed to Louden, ending the inning. Louden threw to Moriarty for a third out on McConnell, just to show it could be done if necessary. Mullin had a bad hunch in the first inning, and a bit of bad luck in the ninth, or he would have scored a shutout. The bad hunch was that after Daniels, who opened the festivities, had let a curve go by, he thought he would let a straight one sail over for a strike. But Daniels sailed it over Cobb's head for a double. Chase's sacrifice was too clever to throw to third, so Daniels took another corner, and spiked the plate while Moriarty was smothering Sterrett's grounder.

The bad luck in the ninth transpired like this: Paddock and Martin had been laid away, and the mourners were dispersing, when Sweeney teased a pass. Wolverton thought it would be a good plan for some one to run for Sweeney, and nominated Warhop. The pitcher was resting on second base by the time Crawford got McConnell's single back to the diamond. Daniels put one down in front of the box that bounded crooked, and loaded the sacks. Chase did exactly the same thing, forcing Warhop home and leaving the corners still occupied. A little luck on either of these and the game would have ended earlier.

Wolverton thought he was the psychological individual to bust up the Tiger lead and retired Sterrett to get a chance, but he failed. Martin's error on Bush, Donie's theft, and Louden's single made the first one. Singles by Moriarty and Mullin, with a sacrifice sandwiched, hung up the second. Louden's second single, Paddock's bad throw, and Moriarty's sacrifice hoist accounted for the third run, and Mullin's stroll, Simmons's wide throw on Vitt, trying to force George, and Cobb's double sent the last one home.

Senators Rally and Win in Tenth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Chicago took a six-run lead on Washington to-day by driving Groome from the slab, but the visitors won in the tenth inning, 8 to 7. Walter Johnson's single with McBride's double in the tenth counted the winning run. Lee Tannehill, veteran infielder of the Chicago team, was sold to-day to Kansas City. The score:

KONETCHY'S BAT ACTIVE.

Drives Out Two Homers and Bats in Three Other Runs in Brooklyn.

Two home runs by Ed Konetchy and another by Oakes carried St. Louis to an easy victory over Brooklyn at Washington Park yesterday afternoon. The score was 8 to 4 and seven of the St. Louis runs were the result of the circuit drives. Ellis's double, his steal of third base and a hit by Hauser in the sixth inning sent in the only run of the visitors in which a home run did not figure.

Neither of Konetchy's hits went outside the fence, but Oakes's drive cleared the right field bulwarks and dropped into First Street. Konetchy's hits traveled to the extreme corner of centre field, where the bleachers and the fence come together, and the big fellow easily made the circuit each time. Huggins was on third base and Magee on second in the third inning when the first long drive arrived. These three runs satisfied the visitors until the fifth inning, when Konetchy came to bat with Mowrey on second base and landed on Knetzer for a second homer. Ellis followed with a double and stole third, scoring on Hauser's single. At this stage Knetzer was recalled, and Curtis was sent to the mound. Oakes welcomed the former Quaker by landing on the second ball he pitched for a home run, scoring Hauser ahead of him. This ended the visitors' scoring for the day.

Curtis pitched good ball after getting the big welcome, but he was taken out of the game in the sixth inning to make room for Eddie Phelps as a pinch hitter. Stack finished the game, and held St. Louis to three scattered singles.

Brooklyn found Slim Sallee often, but could not hit at the right time. Seven hits were wasted in the first five innings. In the sixth inning Wheat's single, Cutshaw's double, Fisher's triple, and a single by Phelps netted three runs. Magee's error of Daubert's drive, a steal, and Wheat's single added another run in the last inning. The score:

STEWART OUTPOINTS M'CARTY AT GARDEN

Young and Inexperienced Missouri Boxer Shows Much Promise as Heavyweight.

In the best heavyweight boxing contest that has been staged in New York in many years Jim Stewart of Brooklyn last night outpointed Luther McCarthy of Springfield, Mo., in ten rounds at Madison Square Garden. The contest marked the début of the Westerner in New York, and while it was unsuccessful for him as regards victory, it was nevertheless impressive, and McCarty, on his showing against the Brooklynite, bids fair to be an important factor in the heavyweight division in the future.

Stewart's strong finish gained him the honors, as up to the eighth round McCarty had held his own. In the last two rounds Stewart clearly outpointed the Westerner and gained the verdict. But when the battle was over Stewart knew well that he had been in a fight, and considering the short experience which McCarthy has enjoyed in the roped arena, his experience was a revelation.

It was the heardest contest in which McCarty, only twenty years of age, has yet engaged. The only other boxer of any note whom McCarty has fought was Carl Morris and the Sapulpa engineer had previously been defeated by Stewart. McCarty handled himself like a natural fighter and showed all the qualifications of a top notcher, although in the crude form that must have been expected in view of his inexperience.

Stewart's ring generalship and long experience stood him in good stead and carried him to victory. He used a good left jab which held McCarty off, and crossed over an occasional right when the inexperienced McCarty left large openings. But with all his crudeness, McCarty made a most favorable impression. Phil Wand, the old California referee, who is paying his first visit to New York, took such a liking to McCarty that he opened negotiations with Billy McCarney, who manages McCarty, to have the youthful heavyweight go to San Francisco for a bout with Charlie Miller.

McCarty had several chances to display his gameness, and proved to the satisfaction of a crowd which packed the Garden to the roof that this essential quality to top-notch honors is not lacking. He also showed his ability to deal out punishment in the proportions expected of a heavyweight. And in boxing McCarty showed up strongly, though his inexperience stood out strongly most of the time. He was outpointed, but far from smothered, and there is no denying that Stewart, while not considered a championship possibility, ranks with any white heavyweight in the ring to-day in the matter of cleverness. Stewart is now fighting better than ever before in his career, and last night he had to show the limit of his resources to stand off the youth.

From the bell that started the two to battle in the opening round to the one which sounded the finish in the tenth there was never a second when either man resorted to stalling tactics, useless clinching, or holding on. Both were there to fight, and showed in every action that they understood their mission. McCarty made a most auspicious start, and tore after the Brooklynite at a clip which seemed to spell early defeat for Stewart. For the first three rounds the Westerner held the advantage, but then the experience of Stewart began to assert itself, and the Brooklynite was able to take advantage of the crudeness in McCarty's attack and defense.

Starting with the fourth round Stewart began to pull down McCarty's lead, and at the close of the sixth he had accomplished the trick. The fighting was always fast, but McCarty seemed to be tiring, and Stewart's persistent jabbing kept McCarty on the jump. In the seventh the fighting was about even and in the eighth McCarty came back, set the pace all the way, and gained the honors. In the last two chapters Stewart carried the fighting to his opponent and gained the honors clearly in each round. Both were strong and fighting hard at the final bell. At no time during the ten rounds was either in any great distress, although both were the recipients of punches that rocked them considerably.

McCarty did his best work with a left hook. He showed plenty of punching power with this hand, and occasionally he jarred Stewart with his right, but his work with this hand was crude. He was continually trying for Stewart's stomach, but he seemed unable to land in a manner which carried any speed behind the blow. He rushed continually, with his arms extended at full length, and wasted the power which the blow would have carried, had he stood still and snapped his punches. The Westerner tipped the scales at 200¼ pounds, and Stewart weighed 203½ pounds.

In the ten-round semi-final Freddie Hicks of Detroit gained the honors over Willie Lewis of New York. The former king of the welterweight division weighed 160 pounds ringside, and plainly showed that he is retrograding fast.

In the first bout George Kirkwood of St. Louis outpointed George Cheney of Baltimore. A crowd of 10,000 witnessed the bouts.

McLOUGHLIN WINS TWICE.

Californian Victor in New York State Tennis Singles and Doubles.

It was the erratic playing of his volleys and smashes that caused Maurice E. McLaughlin, the playing through title holder from the Pacific Coast, to become the centre of interest yesterday upon the resumption of the competitions in the New York State lawn tennis championship on the courts of the Crescent Athletic Club, at Bay Ridge. In both the singles and doubles the net was a constant source of apparent irritation to the usually brilliant player. McLoughlin did not exhibit his propensity to be a trifle off range against Richard H. Palmer in the singles, as the latter played the ball right into the champion's hands, allowing him to win by the smothering score of 6—1, 6—0. Thomas C. Bundy, the other Californian, was far superior in his singles match, in which he defeated James S. Cushman at 6—1, 6—1.

The other reversal was the defeat of Wallace F. Johnson, the former intercollegiate champion of the University of Pennsylvania, who fell before the steady net attack of Charles M. Bull, Jr., at 7—3, 3—6, 6—4. The summary:

Singles, Fourth Round.—T. C. Bundy defeated J. S. Cushman, 6—1, 6—1; M. E. McLoughlin defeated R. H. Palmer, 6—1, 6—0; L. E. Mahan defeated F. C. Inman, 7—5, 6—3; C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated W. F. Johnson, 7—5, 3—6, 6—4.

Doubles, First Round.—Dr. Ewing Taylor and Alfred Stillman 2d, defeated R. W. Seabury and W. D. Hadsell, 8—6, 6—3; J. C. Boys and C. A. Lindley defeated Harold Swain and G. I. Burr, 6—1, 6—2; H. A. Plummer and B. S. Prentice defeated D. R. Todd and J. L. Robertson, 6—3, 6—2; Dr. William Rosenbaum and R. H. Palmer defeated H. H. Bralv and W. M. Hall, 6—3, 1—6, 8—6. Second Round—F. C. Baggs and S. H. Voshell defeated P. S. Dean and W. W. Durland, 6—4, 6—2; G. M. Bodman and W. S. Slade defeated C. C. Chambers and W. Hazard, 6—3, 7—5; M. J. Briggs and S. O. Roche defeated Harry Parker and W. S. Wheller, 6—3, 8—6; C. M. Bull, Jr., and H. C. Martin defeated F. C. Anderson and W. F. Johnson, 6—3, 6—3; W. M. Washburn and L. E. Mahan defeated Dr. J. S. Billings and F. B. Roundey, 6—4, 6—3; Dr. Ewing Taylor and Alfred Stillman, 2d, defeated J. S. Cushman and partner by default; Alrick H. Man, Jr., and L. D. Woodbury defeated H. F. Rothschild and Leo L. Leventritt, 6—4, 6—4; H. A. Plummer and B. S. Prentice defeated J. C. Boys and C. A. Lindley, 6—2, 10—8; M. E. McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy defeated H. H. Hackett and R. N. Williams, 6—4, 6—3.

Third Round—G. M. Bodman and W. S. Slade defeated M. J. Briggs and S. O. Roche, 6—3, 6—4.

Fourth Round—C. F. Watson, Jr., and C. R. Leonard defeated W. L. Pate and R. H. Boggs, 6—2, 6—1.

Capt. TITUS'S ENTRY REJECTED.

National Association Ready to Explain Its Action.

That the name of Constance S. Titus, former amateur champion sculler, was not included in the list of entries for the National Regatta at Peoria, Ill., on Friday and Saturday, issued Sunday night, was explained yesterday by Secretary Fred R. Fortmeyer of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. It was currently reported that Titus was suffering from an injury to the hand, and had withdrawn his name from the entry list. This, however, is not the case, as the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen rejected Titus.

Although no reason was assigned for the rejection of Titus, it was understood in official rowing circles that this action would be taken at the meeting of the Executive Committee. It was also stated last night that, as Titus had made the statement that he would use every effort to learn why his name was not included in the list of entries, the Executive Committee of the N. A. A. O. was ready to answer the question if Titus really desires it answered. It is understood that his amateur standing is questioned by the National association officials, and according to one of the Executive Committee the reason for the rejection of the entry of Titus would be officially announced in the event of the ex-champion requesting it.

HASHA, TEXAS SPEED MARVEL

New Yorkers Will See Crack Motor Cyclist at Brighton Beach To-night.

In his first appearance before the New York fans at the Stadium-Motordrome at Brighton Beach to-night Eddie Hasha, the Texas speed marvel, will be put to the hardest test that he has been subjected to this season. Johnny Albright, his opponent in the four-mile match race, has established a reputation by his consistent work at the Brighton course this season.

Hasha comes heralded as the best man that has ever handled a two-wheeled steel steed on account of his record-smashing performances, and the outlook for a new track mark and a new world's record to supplant the 38 2-5 second dash which he made at Newark some time ago is favorable.

On Thursday night two of the stars of the country, Arthur Chapple, the local favorite, and Ray Peck, who rode to victory over Hartley Thomas of Philadelphia last Sunday night, will be seen in action over the four-mile distance. Both men are fit for a hard fight, and the record for the distance may be shattered.

If Peck succeeds in handing the New York man a beating, he will be the first to accomplish the trick since Chapple has been riding at Brighton Beach, and the prospects for the tightest race of the season are better than ever.

Sunday night the stars of the country will race in the one-hour sweepstakes which will be staged for a high-class field.

MORE OLYMPIANS RETURN.

Seven Members of American Team Arrive Here and in Boston.

The ranks of the home-coming Olympians was increased yesterday when seven members of the American Olympic team reached the States, four getting in on the steamship Lapland, while the remaining three arrived in Boston on the steamer Canadian, from Liverpool. Among those who came on the Lapland were Lieut. Commander Harris Lanning, captain of the victorious rifle team; F. V. Belote, Chicago Athletic Association, one of the finalists in the one hundred meters; John J. Eller, Irish-American Athletic Club, the hurdler, and Frank C. Irons, Chicago Athletic Association, the former Olympic champion running broad jumper.

On the steamship Canadian were Albert Gutterson of the University of Vermont and Boston Athletic Association, the winner of the running broad jump, and maker of a new Olympic record with 24 feet 11¼ inches; Oscar Hedlund, Boston Athletic Association, a finalist in the 1,500 meter race, in which Jackson, the Englishman, defeated the pick of the Americans; and Clarence De Mar of Dorchester, the Marathon runner who finished twelfth in the Stockholm race.

All of these men will be in New York for the reception to be tendered the combined team on August 24.

Tetzlaff to Pilot Fiat Racer.

"Teddy" Tetzlaff, twice winner of the Santa Monica road race and a double winner at the recent Tacoma meet, will be seen in the coming Grand Prize race at Milwaukee. He will pilot an F. I. A. T. car owned by E. E. Hewlett of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Hewlett wired the entry of this car yesterday.

OLYMPIC WINNERS DROPPED BY N. Y. A. C.

Thirty-three Winged Foot Athletes "Get the Gate" in Leading Club.

That the process of reconstruction, and, if need be, possible elimination of competitive athletics which was promised early in the year when the present administration of the New York Athletic Club took office, has at last been in a measure fulfilled, was made evident last night when it became known that thirty-three athletic members of America's premier athletic organization had been dropped from the rolls of the club.

The reason for the action, which was unanimously agreed upon by the Board of Governors, with Ernest F. Haubold, the Vice President, in the chair, was that the men were delinquent in the matter of dues and house accounts. That no favorites were played becomes evident when it is known that among those who fell under the ban were men who won points for the United States in the recent Olympic Games in Stockholm.

Of the thirty-three, five were men who competed in the world's series, and they include Ben Adams, second to his brother Platt in the standing high jump and third in the standing broad jump; Clarence C. Childs, who was third in the hammer throw, Simon P. Gillis, a several times champion hammer thrower; Gordon B. Dukes, a one-time title holder at vaulting, and Fred Kaiser, the present champion walker.

The action was taken at the June meeting of the Board of Governors, but positive action was deferred until the July session, when it was decided to drop the men. Each of the delinquents had been warned that his semi-annual dues from March 31 to Aug. 31 were due, and after repeated notices that they would have to abide by the consequences of refusal to settle there were responses from all excepting the thirty-three who were dropped.

The matter reached a climax yesterday when Ben Adams, who recently returned from the Olympic Games, was refused admission to the clubhouse in Central Park South, and it was after this seeming knockout blow to an Olympic point winner that the matter became known.

Inquiry of a member of the Board of Governors developed that the action had been taken, and that the end has not been reached.

"We are going to conserve the best interests of the club," said this man, "and work along the lines agreed upon when we first took office. We have no desire to cut off competitive athletics, but it is the unanimous opinion of the board that if a man belonging to the organization cannot pay the nominal sum of $10 for a year's dues he cannot pay anything, and it's about time he got out of it.

"Capt. Halpin knew all about the action, and he had many of the men under his wing, as it were, and should have made them acquainted with our intended action, if our repeated warnings had not reached them. We do all we can within reason for the competitive athletes of the club, even to the payment of the registration fees, but if they think that they can dodge dues and house accounts they will find themselves very much mistaken."

Tie in Chess Final Result.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRESLAU, Aug. 5.—A. K. Rubinstein, Russia's chess champion and winner of the San Sebastian and Poestyen tournaments of this year, again figures in first place at the conclusion of the German Chess Association's tournament here, but on this occasion he shares chief honors with C. S. Duras of Prague, whose previous successes of a like nature date back to the Vienna and Prague tournaments of 1908. Both of these masters finished with a total score of 12 to 5. Rubinstein was hampered in the final round by being paired with Teichmann, who drew, and thereby won the third prize with a score of 11½ to 5½. Duras, on the other hand, succeeded in vanquishing Burn of Liverpool. The final round was not without its sensation, for Dr. Tarrasch, who might have figured in a triple tie by winning his last game from Carls of Bremen, lost it. In consequence of this setback, the Nuremberg physician was forced back into fourth place on an equality with Schlechter of Vienna, who was paired with and drew against Cohn of Berlin. Dr. Tarrasch and Schlechter wound up their schedules, each with a score of 11 to 6.

NEW BILL TO CURB HOLDING COMPANIES

Chairman Stanley Offers Measure to Bar Them from Inter-State Commerce.

GARDNER SWIFTLY ATTACKS

Idea Based on Republican Report, He Says, but the Stanley Proposition Would Smash Business.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Representative Augustus Stanley and Representative Augustus Gardner, who are the ranking Democratic and Republican members of the Stanley Steel Committee, added to-day to the merriment occasioned by the quintet of reports already filed by that committee by locking horns on the regulation of trusts.

Chairman Stanley precipitated the controversy by introducing a far-reaching bill to prohibit holding companies from engaging in inter-State commerce, but limiting this remedy to the steel business alone. The bill does not have the support of his colleagues, Democratic or Republican, on the Steel Committee, but was introduced as expressive of his own views.

Before the ink of the bill clerk was dry on the Stanley bill, Mr. Gardner was out with a declaration that the Stanley bill was an afterthought, forced upon the Chairman by the Republican recommendation for forced recapitalization and strong control of industrial corporations by the Federal Government.

"The issue is squarely joined," asserted Mr. Gardner, "between those who believe that trusts should be regulated by the conflicting laws of forty-eight States, and those who believe that business has obliterated State lines, and that the trusts should be controlled by the National Government, as the railroads are controlled.

"The issue must soon be met, whether we mean to dissolve the trusts or whether we mean to recognize them and make them behave themselves.

"The majority of the Steel Committee are still at the parting of the ways. Speaking for myself, I recommend the abandonment of the policy of dissolution. In its place I hope to see thoroughly efficient National control by a Federal commission.

"Mr. Stanley's new bill is a direct result of our minority report. He has now adopted some of our ideas. To that extent his new bill is commendable. In other respects it is revolutionary. To be sure, he only applied his ideas to the iron and steel industry, but if the bill is sound for the steel industry it is sound for all industries. If it were to be applied to all industries there is no fear that it would prove ineffective. It would be effective enough. It would smash business to smithereens.

"I cannot help believing that this new proposition, coming as it does so soon after the minority report, is conceived in the selfsame spirit which actuates the true Kentucky gentleman when he says, 'Well, stranger, I'll just go you five plunks better.'"

When Mr. Gardner's statement was brought to the attention of Chairman Stanley the latter exclaimed:

"The regulation of intra-State corporations to the extent of fixing prices for their products does not involve an amendment to the Constitution. It involves the dissolution of the Constitution. A Government of indissoluble and indestructible States would not longer exist. If the Government has the power to fix prices of the products of big corporations it would have the same power to fix the prices of little ones.

"Mr. Gardner's proposition of Federal price fixing is imperialism and paternalism pure and simple. The institution of such a Government as that would necessitate not the amendment of the Constitution, but its abandonment."

Advocates of the system of trust control embodied in the John Sharp Williams bill, or the modification of it just presented to Congress by Chairman Stanley of the Steel Investigating Committee, are watching closely for the attitude the Bull Moose platform will take on this subject. Col. Roosevelt has committed himself to a plan of trust control which is diametrically opposite to the principles of the Williams and Stanley bills.

Robert R. Reed of Caldwell, Masslich & Reed, who drafted the Stanley bill, and also the Williams bill, which he still advocates, contrasted yesterday the principles embodied in the Democratic measures with those Col. Roosevelt has indorsed. The Roosevelt plan, he said, would mean an oligarchy of Presidential favorites controlling the business of the country. He called the Roosevelt policy "a trust plan of trust control," which would be destructive to independent business and independent finance.

"My co-operation with Chairman Stanley," he said, "has been more with the view of aiding in the great public work which he has carried forward so effectively than of presenting my own plan of a restrictive law.

"The Stanley bill speaks for itself. Like the John Sharp Williams bill it prescribes a rule of safety in corporate charters and conduct, a rule for the future to which existing corporations must comply. Necessarily it excludes the Steel Trust, whose present charter and organization are unsafe. It permits it, however, to reorganize its constituent holding companies into single operating companies, thus preserving the business units and economic efficiency necessary to effective competition.

"Unlike the court decrees, the Stanley bill provides complete disintegration. It prevents the common ownership or control of different companies and insures a return to competitive conditions. If it is enacted it will be necessary for the companies affected to bring themselves within its requirements. In doing this they must, of course, protect the bonded debt by arrangements satisfactory to the bondholders. No embarrassment need be feared on this score. The essential thing is that the business of the country be placed on a legitimate basis and saved from the assumed need of Federal control.

"I do not expect this bill to pass, but as the Democratic platform has indorsed the Williams bill proposal, and it is also supported by leading Republicans, I do hope that a safe constructive bill applicable to all corporations will in due time be enacted. It will, I believe, solve the trust problem without other or more drastic legislation."

THE BUSINESS WORLD

DRY GOODS OPEN BETTER.

Monday's Trading Heavier Than for Many Weeks Past.

The dullness usually attendant on the opening of the week in the New York dry-goods market was more or less discounted yesterday by the increased activity displayed by the out-of-town buyers. Mail orders were reported in good numbers for this time of the year by a number of prominent houses, and taken as a whole, the day's trading was somewhat heavier than that of the usual Monday.

In the jobbing trade, wash goods came in for a good part of the attention of buyers, and one of the largest handlers of these lines in the market reported the biggest Monday business in several weeks. Dress goods were generally active and Fall silks moved well under the demands of a rather limited number of buyers. Smaller buyers were not so active in silks from all accounts. The movement of ginghams, prints and domestics was hardly more than fair, but laces showed signs of continuing the activity that has featured them for the past several months. Floor coverings were slow.

There was a fair call for Spring hosiery in the primary market, considering that the season is now "between hay and grass." Underwear for the coming season did not move so well. The opening of several lines of men's wear fancies by one of the largest producers in the country featured the day in the worsted and woolen goods end of the market. Dress linens for the Spring met a generally fair demand and the fine cotton goods end of the trade brightened somewhat under the receipt of press reports to the effect that attempts would be made this week to end the weavers' strike in New Bedford.

FEWER FORCED SALES.

Auction Room Disposing of Accumulated Stock for Sound Reasons.

Activities of the auction room reflect a generally normal condition of textile business, according to Alphonse Montant of Townsend & Montant, auctioneers, 87 Leonard Street. The usual amount of merchandise is being disposed of at auction from week to week, but there is no indication that the firms for which the goods are offered are cleaning up their stocks because the return on them is urgently needed. In other words, there are few forced sales being made. Manufacturers and wholesalers to-day turn to the auction room as the natural outlet for accumulated stocks, whether they are seconds or perfectly made merchandise retarded by unfavorable weather, fashions, or other legitimate reasons. The return is quick, credit troubles are avoided, and the prices are almost invariably better than can be obtained by offering the merchandise at private sale.

The usual number of failures is being recorded from day to day, but, according to Mr. Montant, it is kept from increasing very much by the conservative policy generally adopted by the credit men of the larger houses and the average smaller firm. The present tendency of the latter class to avoid too rapid expansion on a limited amount of available capital is also held partly responsible for the soundness of present conditions.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Twill Lappings Assessed on Weight and Count of Threads.

Protests by F. Brodt & Co. were sustained by the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday, reversing Collector Loeb. Fine, plain, and strong twill lappings had been assessed at 44 cents per pound and 50 and 55 per cent. per pound, respectively, under Paragraph 378 of the present Tariff act, while the importers contended for a rate under Paragraph 357, according to the weight and count of threads. The board found the goods to be woven fabrics, weighing more than four and a half ounces to the square yard and counting between 60 and 120 threads to the square inch, composed of a flax warp and wool woft, flax being the component material of chief value, and held them dutiable at 2¾ cents per square yard and 30 per cent. ad valorem, but at a total not less than 50 per cent.

The American Thermo Ware Company established that unframed grotesque mirrors were properly dutiable as "parts of toys," instead of at 45 per cent. as mirrors.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

New York.

ALBANY, Aug. 5.—Among the companies incorporated to-day were:

Kelly-Field Company of Manhattan, commission merchants and brokers for automobiles, $10,000. Charles F. U. Kelly, Harry E. Field, and Jaques L. Boisse.

New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 5.—The following corporations were chartered in the office of Secretary of State Crater to-day:

The Comfort Shoe Manufacturing Company, Jamesburg, $100,000 capital; to manufacture horseshoe boots. Incorporators, W. Willie Mitchell, George W. Percy, and H. N. Bursmith.

The Detachable Umbrella Company, Newark, $10,000 capital; to manufacture umbrellas. Incorporators, David Reinhorn, Frank P. Annelle, and Giuseppe Pecoreb.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

The continuance of the demand for white hosiery for Spring, 1913, is one of the present features of the local knit goods market.

One of the most prominent shoe men in the Middle West is responsible for the statement that patent leathers are selling 20 per cent. better in that part of the country this year.

A pronounced revival of the demand for brocaded silks is expected for the coming Spring season. From all accounts, they bid fair to rank among the leaders.

According to a prominent New York retail buyer, short white gloves, heavily stitched with black, will be one of the dominant factors in these goods for Fall.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Imports of fur entered at the Port of New York in the week ended July 27 were valued at $397,827, against $273,318 in the previous week. Fur waste entered was valued at $807, and hatters' fur goods at $14,788. Feather imports in the same period were valued at $58,448.

According to advices received in the New York produce market, the Missouri potato crop will be large this year. Estimates place the total crop at close to 6,000,000 bushels.

SILVERWARE TRADING BRISK.

Fall Influx of Southern and Western Jewelers Has Begun.

The influx of Southern and Western jewelers for Fall purchases has begun, and silversmiths in the Maiden Lane district handling plated ware report some very good business, considering the earliness of the season. House sales to date have been generally good, and the amount of business turned in by salesmen now out with the new season's lines tends to bear out the reports of prosperity that have reached New York from various parts of the country. Steady improvement in spot buying is looked for in the next few weeks. More than the usual number of buyers is expected in the market this year, because of the special rates obtained by the Merchants' Association, and more than the ordinary amount of spot business is looked for as a result.

According to one of the dominant factors in the district, it is practically assured that there will be no upward revision of prices on plated ware this year. It is needed badly enough from all accounts in the face of the rising cost of production, but with so much agitation going on about reducing the high cost of living, it is held wiser to take a smaller profit than to retard trading, in what will apparently be an unusually good season, by boosting prices. An increase is believed to be inevitable by some traders, but just when it will take place is problematical at the present moment.

WEAVERS' STRIKE STILL ON.

Dry Goods Trade Worried by Prospect of a Prolonged Struggle.

The weavers' strike at New Bedford entered its fourth week yesterday, and converters of fine cotton goods in the New York market are wondering just when the trouble will end. Press reports received in the market yesterday morning indicated a possibility of an agreement being reached this week between the manufacturers and the strikers, and correspondence received during the day by a prominent house expressed the same belief. This was discounted somewhat, however, by the report of a well-known dry goods man who spent Sunday in New Bedford and reported that the situation showed no appreciable change.

The effect of the strike is now being felt by the finishers, and from all accounts it will also affect the printers shortly if some sort of a compromise is not reached. The stock of gray cloths on hand is being rapidly used up, and the situation is assuming a serious aspect all around. The general trade is anxious to have the strike settled, not only because of the serious shortage a prolongation of the trouble would produce, but because of the reported increasing of prices by the mills that are not affected.

TITANIC FUND NOT TOO BIG.

Dependents of 673 of Crew and 461 Passengers Being Relieved.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Although the Mansion House and other funds for the relief of the Titanic sufferers exceed $2,000,000, reports made to the Lord Mayor indicate that all this will be required to maintain the allowances now made for the relief of the dependents of the victims of the disaster.

Of 673 of the crew who were drowned, 535 belonged to Southampton and 138 to other places. For those belonging to Southampton claims have been made to the Mansion House Committee for 259 widows, 533 children under sixteen years of age, and 213 other dependents.

Claims have been received on behalf of the dependents of 461 of the 817 passengers lost in the wreck.

It has been decided to obtain before Oct. 1 more exact actuarial calculations as to the amount required for the relief of the dependents of the crew and passengers. In the meanwhile half wages are being paid to dependents of the drowned members of the crew as a general basis of help, with additional relief in cases of large families or exceptional circumstances.

For the passengers' dependents applications for temporary help are dealt with by the committee pending the final settlement of their claims.

MAY BE TWO WARSHIPS YET.

Navy Democrats in House Joined by Allies from the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Friends of the navy in the Senate are taking a hand in the struggle in the House for the authorization of two new battleships. These Senatorial leaders are not actually interfering, but they served notice to-night, through silently effective channels, that unless the House swings around on the naval programme and grants to two battleships, members of the popular branch may as well hang up their hats and prepare to remain here awhile.

The Senators taking the lead in this position insist that this is no time to skimp on the navy, and that every factor in the nval situation demands that not less than two battleships should be authorized at this session.

The next crisis in the battleship fight will come to-morrow evening, when the Democrats of the House will hold another caucus for the purpose of considering the demand of the two-battleship Democrats that the action of the former caucus be rescinded. The slogan of the friends of the navy in this caucus will be: "Rescind your former action and let every man vote the way he wants."

The fight will pivot around this battle cry, as freedom of action will mean enough Democrats joining Republicans to insure two battleships.

MORGAN FINANCES TERMINALS

Plans for Cincinnati Union Station Call for $6,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 5.—According to information received in Cincinnati financial circles to-day, the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. has formally assured the financing of the new Cincinnati Union Station project, of which Archibald S. White, former gas magnate of this city, and John B. Bleekman of New York have been the principal promoters.

A report from New York was to the effect that the money is now available, and the station and terminals for the railroads and another entrance and terminals for interurban lines will be built. This report states that the cost of the project will be in the neighborhood of $6,000,000, instead of $36,000,000, as at first planned.

SUIT OVER BIGELOW BOND.

Old Dominion Copper Seeks a Million from Fidelity Company.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The Old Dominion Copper Mining and Smelting Company today began suit for $1,000,000 in the Superior Court against the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, arising out of a bond for $500,000, given by the defendant, to dissolve an attachment made on the property of Albert S. Bigelow when the plaintiff company began a suit against him.

The Old Dominion Copper Mining and Smelting Company alleges that it obtained judgment against Bigelow for $1,292,433 in one suit and $886,240 in the other, with costs amounting to $4,100, on Nov. 27, 1909, and has not been satisfied.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The value of crab meat exported from Japan increased from $364,394 in 1910 to $467,103 in 1911. The United States and Hawaii took upward of 90 per cent. of the total.

A few good American firms with sound financial backing and sufficient capital could soon obtain a large portion of the Liberian trade, according to Consul General W. D. Crum, Monrovia. It can only be obtained, however, by maintaining agents in that country. Advertising matter and trade literature circulated among European and Liberian merchants there are money and energy misapplied. Results obtained by such measures are meagre.

The Basse Terre Consular office has received several complaints from merchants in Guadeloupe in reference to underpaid postage on letters and circulars coming from the United States. In addition, the merchants of the colony speak of a lack of courtesy on the part of American houses seeking business there.

MAY SELL MOFFAT ROAD TO ERB GROUP

Denver Security Holders Will Meet New York Associates To-day to Discuss Terms.

TO FORM A NEW COMPANY

Purchasers Would Spend $1,000,000 on Improvements to Increase Road's Facilities.

Whether or not the noteholders of the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific, better known as the Moffat road, will accept an offer for the property recently tendered by Newman Erb on behalf of himself and associates may be decided to-day at a joint meeting of the committee named to look after the interests of the security holders with Mr. Erb.

Denver bankers who hold a considerable amount of the Colorado & Utah construction notes issued on behalf of the new road were in conference yesterday afternoon with Vice President Strong of the Bankers' Trust Company, but came to no decision in the matter of accepting the terms offered for the property. It is understood that the Erb offer will be accepted if certain modifications desired by the noteholders are allowed.

It has been reported that Mr. Erb plans to form a new company to operate and eventually complete the Moffat road. This company would take up the $3,500,000 of 6 per cent. one-year notes which are in default, and deliver in exchange its own 5 per cent. bonds. In addition, according to the report, Mr. Erb and his associates would agree to spend $1,000,000 for improvements to the property, taking the new bonds in payment. It has been said that the principal objection offered by the noteholders is against the proposed reduction in their interest rate.

The Denver, Northwestern & Pacific was originally conceived by the late David H. Moffat as a new short line which would put Denver on a direct transcontinental line. The main line of the Union Pacific from Omaha to Ogden passes about 100 miles to the north, while the Denver & Rio Grande from Pueblo to Salt Lake City, and its connection there with the Western Pacific to the coast passes 125 miles to the south of Denver. Mr. Moffat was a wealthy banker of Denver, who had the interests of his city at heart, and he conceived the building of a new direct line from Denver to Salt Lake City. Upward of $14,000,000 has been expended in building 215 miles of line now in operation as far as Steamboat Springs. Most of the promoter's large personal fortune was sunk in the endeavor to complete the road.

There are large deposits of bituminous coal in Routt County, reached by the Moffat road, and it was anticipated that their business would prove an important part of the company's tonnage. This business, owing partly to the excessive grades over which it has to be moved in crossing the continental divide, and partly to a lack of equipment, never materialized in the volume anticipated when the line was projected. One of Mr. Erb's plans for making the road a success calls for the early purchase of more cars, with provision for storing a large quantity of coal in Denver during the Summer, when operation of the road is less difficult. It is also proposed to build extensive snow sheds as a protection against the storms which make the line almost impassable during part of the Winter. It is hoped eventually to complete the road to Salt Lake City, a distance of 364 miles from Steamboat Springs, and to get a four-mile tunnel through the Rockies, which will shorten the distance by sixteen miles, while doing away with much of the grade.

WILL REMOVE LAX GUARD.

Kindness to Col. Wilson Will Cost Prison Officer His Job.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Attorney General Wickersham to-day practically decided to remove C. J. Shea, an Atlanta penitentiary gurd, for the freedom he allowed Col. Christopher C. Wilson, former President of the United Wireless Company, during his recent stay in New York to testify in bankruptcy proceedings.

Wilson is serving a three-year term in prison for using the mails to defraud and was taken to New York in charge of Shea under habeas corpus proceedings. The liberty allowed Wilson was investigated by the Grand Jury.

The affair has caused the Attorney General to issue orders drawing the lines tighter around Federal prisoners temporarily removed from the penitentiary under the writ of habeas corpus.

ANOTHER HALL OF FAME.

San Francisco Is to Honor Natives—Three Women Named.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—San Francisco, like New York, is to have a Hall of Fame. Therein the twenty native sons and daughters of California who have done most to reflect glory on their State are to be glorified i nart glass and sculpture.

The temple is being erected by the Native Sons' organization. In the main hall are twenty oval frames, garlanded with laurel wreaths. In each will be placed the art glass effigy of one who has helped make history in California.

Three daughters of the State, Gertrude Atherton, Sybil Sanderson, and Mary Anderson, have been selected for the honor. The public is invited to name the following seventeen. On the walls will be placed portraits of many, who, though not natives of California, have been identified with the State.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

JOSEPH SAMUELS & CO.—A petition has been filed against Joseph and Jacques Samuels, who compose the firm of Joseph Samuels & Co., manufacturers of millinery, braid, and embroideries at 129 West Twentieth Street, by Dittenhoefer, Gerber & James, attorneys for these creditors: Frederick A. Johnson, $5,000; Ernest A. Reed, $2,500, and Robert Ray, Jr., $300. It is alleged that they made preferential payments to various creditors. Herman H. Oppenheim, attorney for the firm, said that the total liabilities were about $295,000, of which $225,000 were contingent as indorsements for other concerns, and he thought the direct creditors of the firm would be paid in full. He estimated the nominal assets at about $500,000. He could give no idea of the actual value of the assets, as they would depend largely on whether the contingent liabilities were paid by the other concern. Judge Holt appointed Alexander S. Webb receiver of the assets of Joseph Samuels & Co. under a bond of $50,000, authorized him to continue business for thirty days, and to borrow $5,000, and to pledge the entire assets as security for this loan.

McPARTLAND & O'FLAHERTY COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the McPartland & O'Flaherty Company, dealer in dry goods, corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-third Street, by Rosenberg & Levis, attorneys for these creditors: Sol. Rosenstein, $239; H. Perez, $60; L. P. Henryson & Co., $120, and Commercial Trades Company, $320. Judge Holt appointed Lindsay Russell receiver, bond $25,000, with authority to continue business thirty days and borrow $5,000 on receiver's certificates on application of Rosenberg & Levis, who said that the liabilities were $125,000 and assets $75,000. The business was started fifty years ago by the firm of McPartland & O'Flaherty.

FRANCIS A. ADAMS.—Francis A. Adams of 515 West 138th Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $4,719 and no assets. Lloyd C. Griscom of 52 William Street is a creditor for $500 on three notes.

COLUMBIA REAL ESTATE COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Columbia Real Estate Company at Forty-second Street and Broadway by Olcott, Gruber, Bonynge & McManus, attorneys for these creditors: George Lewis, $337; W. O. Bagley, $310, and James S. Devlin, $110. It was alleged that the company on June 1 made preferential payments to Charles J. Leager of $117 and the Pusey Press of $124, and on July 1, because of insolvency, George R. Beach of Jersey City was appointed receiver in that State on the application of the Industrial Savings and Loan Company. The two companies were closely connected in business, and Supt. Van Tuyl of the New York State Banking Department took charge of the Industrial Savings and Loan Company on June 29 last. When the receiver was appointed in New Jersey, as it is a New Jersey corporation, it was stated that the liabilities were $3,100,000, of which there were mortgages of $1,700,000, bonds outstanding of $1,300,000, and taxes and interest of $100,000. The assets were estimated at $3,150,000, consisting of real estate, $2,500,000, and contracts, $650,000. The company was interested in real estate at Grantwood, Morsemere, and Hudson Heights, N. J.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Recovery in Most Active Issues, with Slight General Advance in Prices.

Trading was in lighter volume on the Stock Exchange yesterday. The general level of prices did not go above the best figures of Saturday, but several of the leading issues made fair net gains for the day, and the final averages showed a slight net advance. It was a holiday in London, and there was no business from that centre to swell the volume of local trading. The market acted as if awaiting some new incentive, and as content in the meanwhile to keep good the rise in prices which came about last week. There was more discussion of the probable contents of Mr. Wilson's speech of acceptance, but not very much attention was paid to the preliminary activities of the third party convention, which gathered yesterday in Chicago. The interest which the financial community is to-day taking in political affairs is of a much milder kind than that which it gave to the more stirring incidents of the pre-convention contests and of the gatherings of the representatives of the two great parties. This is doubtless due to the gratifying course of events in industry and agriculture, which together govern business sentiment to a much larger extent than it is influenced by political discussions. There was no departure yesterday from the favorable character of crop news, and grain prices again ended the day at a net decline. The days which still precede harvest, even in the more northerly sections of the grain belt, are rapidly slipping by, and the chances are thus being greatly minimized of any material decline in the very excellent crop promise. Harvest, indeed, is fast proceeding, and each day not only lessens the length of time during which grains will still be exposed to damage, but also diminishes the area to which any possible damage could extend. This is a sustaining factor of prime importance in the security market, and offers itself as the chief explanation of the continued firmness in prices.

There was some recovery yesterday from the rapid decline which took place last week in foreign exchange rates, but this did not necessarily imply a cessation of the borrowing in London by American bankers, which has been one of the noteworthy features of recent money market movements. When sterling exchange rates recently advanced practically to the gold export point, strong inducement was offered to our bankers to profit by the difference of about 2 per cent. between interest rates here and in London. Not only was there an advantage in this interest rate difference, but there was practically no risk in drawing bills with exchange very close to the gold point. These conditions favored the sale of finance bills, and this movement was carried on on a large scale, with a resultant sharp decline in exchange. This has lessened, of course, the incentive to draw bills on London, but there still remains practically the same difference in interest rates between the two markets as prevailed when the drawing of finance bills began, and it is probable that in diminished volume, these drafts on London will continue until the margin between money rates at the two centres has been lessened. The drawing of these finance bills in large volume injects an interesting element into the international money position, which a little later in the season will play an important part in governing the relations between this money market and those of Europe. The presence of these bills in the market will serve, on one hand, to lessen our command upon European funds when the Fall export movement assumes full proportions, but, on the other hand, in discounting these bills London is, in effect, lessening the pressure which its own market will feel when European consumers come to pay for cotton and other imports of American products.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2⅝@3 per cent., with the last loan at 2⅞ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 2¾ per cent.

Time money rates, 3½ per cent. for sixty days, 3½@3¾ per cent. for ninety days, 4@4½ per cent. for four months, 4¾@5 per cent. for five and six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5@5½ per cent. for prime four to six months' maturity.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $188,110,299; balances, $9,059,377; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $2,574.

The local banks lost $107,000 on their Sub-Treasury transactions this week.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: Paris, 2⅝ per cent. and Berlin, 3¾ per cent. Money rates were 4 per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate in London was 25f 25½c, and the Berlin check rate on London 20 marks 47½ pfennigs.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Awaiting June Earnings.

While earnings statements for the final month of the 1912 railroad year have been issued by the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Atchison and many smaller roads, the Union and Southern Pacific are still to be heard from. It is not unusual for the June reports to be delayed. Numerous odds and ends which ordinarily can be put over for another month have to be included in the final statement. With most of the companies it is customary to include one-twelfth of the annual taxes in each month's figures until the end of the year, when adjustments for any underestimates over overestimates are made. The Harriman roads' figures will probably appear this week. The St. Paul is another company whose statement is being awaited with a good deal of interest.

⁂

Good Equipment Business.

The railways are buying equipment much more freely than they were a year ago. Up to Aug. 1 orders have been reported by the manufacturers for a total of 2,246 engines, or 968 more than had been sold on the corresponding date in 1911, and for 81,042 freight cars, or 48,370 more than for last year. Besides the sales which have been made, the companies have had inquiries for 12,674 freight cars, 315 passenger cars, and 260 locomotives. That would seem like pretty good business, but it is doubtful if the railroads as a whole have added new rolling stock at a rate commensurate with their growth in traffic. It is now too late to place orders for cars to be delivered by crop moving time, but a number of roads will be in the market just as soon as the market for equipment trusts and bonds shows sufficient improvement.

Vacations and Business.

"Unfinished business" as of July 1 is likely to be unfinished business on Sept. 1 in the financial district. At least four railroad reorganizations are waiting for the return of the several members of the Protective Committees in whose hands the plans for getting the companies out of their legal difficulties were left. The committees made as much progress as they could before vacation time arrived, but have not been able to get enough advisers together since to take any important step. This inability of the Protective Committees to stay in town all Summer is not an unmitigated evil. Having agreed on the immediate expenditures to be made to relieve the most pressing necessities of the road concerned, and having given directions for the authorization and sale of receivers' certificates to cover such expenditures, the committees can adjourn with the assurance that when they again meet to work out the problems of their property they will find these simplified by the improvement which results from operation of the road by the receiver. It is a very difficult matter to get a quorum of the ordinary Board of Directors together in midsummer.

⁂

Weyman & Bruton Stock Gains.

A wide gap between the bid and asked prices of the tobacco issues is no bar to a sale. Yesterday 100 shares of Weyman & Bruton changed hands at 250, which is an advance of 25 points over the previous sale.

⁂

Canadian Pacific's Plans.

Friends of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and the Canadian Pacific in New York said that his denial of any plans by the Directors for an early issue of stock was what Wall Street knows as the technical denial. That is to say, no plan exists until it is officially adopted at a regular session of the board. At any rate, Sir Thomas's reported ignorance of any proposed melon cutting was not allowed to dampen the enthusiasm for Canadian Pacific shares, which made a new high record at 277½ and closed the day with a gain of 3 points.

⁂

Missouri Pacific's Recovery.

The man who used to advise all of his friends to buy Missouri Pacific stock in order to share in that road's expected recovery has been little in evidence lately. As a matter of fact, he has had to bear a large amount of abuse, which he did not really deserve. When B. F. Bush succeeded George J. Gould as the head of "Mop" it was announced that the bankers had promised him a free hand, and that no expense would be spared in making the road a modern transportation property. Mr. Bush did his best, but he could not ward off the disastrous floods which struck the South last Winter. Those floods were hard on the Missouri Pacific shareholders. When the damage had been reckoned and repairs were under way the market received another heavy blow through the sale of the Rockefeller Education Fund holdings. On July 13 Missouri Pacific sold at 35, and it had not sold 3 points higher than that until yesterday, when it advanced to 38¼. Its close at 38 represented a gain of ⅞. In the fiscal year, which ended June 30, the company had a deficit after charges of $2,100,000. It might seem difficult to trace bullish sentiment to that announcement but for the fact that last year's report carried a deficit of $5,232,000. A decrease of $3,132,000 in a deficit is progress in the right direction.

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES.

The fifty typical stocks yesterday averaged closely during the whole day's swing to the prices of Saturday. The highest was exactly the same. They went a shade lower at lowest; the close was about a tenth above. The industrials did just a bit better than the railroads. The averages were:

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday extreme dullness was shown. Copper was about unchanged for near-by deliveries, but a shade lower for late months. Lead was weak, at a recession of nearly ⅛c. Tin was steady at an improvement of ⅛ in the bid.

The closing bid and asked prices were as follows:

	Monday. Bid.	Asked.	Friday. Bid.	Asked.
Standard copper—

The London Metal Exchange was closed yesterday by reason of the bank holiday.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Yesterday's Limited Volume of Transactions on the Curb Made Small Price Changes.

There was a slight broadening of the market for outside securities yesterday, with an increased amount of interest in the mining issues. The volume of sales showed no increase, however. Standard Oil stocks were the features of the trading, Standard Oil of New Jersey selling up to 424. United Cigar Stores, on relatively small dealings, sold within a range of two points from its closing price of 289 at the end of last week.

The principal transactions yesterday, with opening, high, low, and last prices, were:

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN.

Sears-Roebuck and Quaker Oats Sell at High Levels at Chicago.

While the activity on the Exchanges in other cities was not general, several specialties made good advances in yesterday's trading, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

On the Baltimore Exchange prices were decidedly firm, but gains were confined to small fractions. Investment bonds were in good demand.

The Boston specialties were rather quiet. United States Smelting was strong. Butte and Superior went up about a point, and East Butte was active in the early trading. These were the only stocks which attracted much attention. United Fruit was sold in small lots, and dropped to 200.

Sears-Roebuck common touched 200 at Chicago, a small lot selling at that price, which sets a new high record, but the price dropped back around 198 in the later trading.

A sale of Quaker Oats common was made at 305, a further advance of 5 points. There seems to be a standing order in the market for all the stock available regardless of price. The Directors of the company are due to meet almost any day now for the purpose of acting in the matter of quarterly dividends on both classes of stock. The best information is that the company has no intention of announcing anything of importance at this time.

David Forgan, President of the National City Bank, said yesterday:

"With the revival of general trade the banks throughout the West are finding a better borrowing demand from their own customers. This is notably the case in Chicago, St. Louis, and important reserve centres of the interior.

"In the last few days there has been a definite hardening of money rates throughout the West in response to the increasing demand for accommodation from mercantile sources. This is a good sign and shows that the country is doing a larger business than it did a year ago."

New high records were established at Philadelphia in the York Railways stocks yesterday afternoon, the common selling up to 12⅝ and the preferred going to 34⅜. The demand was taken to presage an increase in the preferred dividend.

Except for a little flurry of buying orders in United Gas Improvement during the early dealings, which lifted that stock to the highest point of the year, the remainder of the Philadelphia market lacked anything approaching activity.

Lehigh Valley Transit preferred moved up with the York Railways stocks. Sentiment in local financial circles remained hopeful, but the tendency appeared to be to await the outcome of the week's important developments before making further market commitments. Nevertheless, a good many buying orders were reported for the better grade of issues just under their present ruling prices.

General Asphalt scored a fractional decline, and this was true, too, of Philadelphia Traction as well as some of the arbitrage shares, but the fluctuations were so narrow as to be scarcely considered significant.

NAME RECEIVERS FOR WIRELESS COMPANY

Pittsburgh Corporation Involved in Much Litigation Over Patents.

Judge Joseph Cross, sitting in the United States Court at Trenton, appointed yesterday Samuel M. Kintner of Pittsburgh and Halsey M. Barrett of Bloomfield, N. J., receivers for the National Electric Signaling Company, which, after the United Wireless Company, was the greatest rival of the Marconi Wireless Company in this country. The company was incorporated on Nov. 5, 1902, with an authorized capital stock of $100,000, for the purpose of the manufacture, use, and sale of inventions relating to wireless telegraph and telephone, and to exploit and make commercially profitable the inventions of Reginald A. Fessenden.

According to the papers in the case, the company now owns stations at Brant Rock and Boston, Mass.; at Watch Hill, R. I., and upon steamships of the New England Steamship Company and the Colonial line. It also owns a manufacturing plant in Brooklyn. A tract of land which it owned is now in Fessenden's name. Its great assets, it is alleged, are the inventions of Fessenden, the value of which cannot be determined until litigation which has tied the affairs of the company up is settled.

It is set forth that not only the success of the company but the value of its assets depends upon the outcome of at least fifteen suits at law regarding the patent rights and other phases of wireless development. It is stated that the system and inventions "are and will be" the subject of much complicated litigation not only in the Patent Office but in the courts here and in other cities. It says it owes $25,000 to employes.

The company has also had trouble with Inventor Fessenden, which, it alleges, has made it impossible to carry out some of the intentions for which it was formed. Stockholders obtained a temporary injunction a year ago enjoining him from "interfering with the granting of certain patents." It was stated at the time that Fessenden was interested with the petitioners in the granting of about ninety different patents, many of them in connection with wireless telegraphy. They alleged that they feared that the acts of Fessenden would endanger their investments.

The issue of the injunction was preceded by a sensational attempt to get possession of certain papers from Prof. Fessenden, who was then at Brant Rock, near Boston. It was reported that Mrs. Fessenden was alone at the station when certain persons attempted to get in for the purpose of obtaining certain papers. Mrs. Fessenden refused to allow the men to enter, and when they attempted to break in she sent word by wireless to Sheriff Collinswood of Boston and got help. The inventor finally attached the property of the signaling company at Brant Rock and the Boston station. On May 18 of this year he obtained a verdict against them for $406,175.

On account of the trouble with the inventor and the complicated litigation in which the company is involved over patent rights, Mr. Wolcott alleged that the company at present had no funds with which to pay its indebtedness.

A Significant Comparison

Sixteen years ago we sold the 5 per cent Consolidated Bonds of the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf R. R. at 69. To-day the price is 107. These bonds constituted a second mortgage on 220 miles of road, earning $2,500 per mile.

We now recommend bonds secured by a first mortgage on 900 miles of road, in similar territory, earning $5,500 per mile. At their present price they yield 5.35 per cent.

At your request we will gladly carry this comparison further.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While the undertone of the market as a whole appeared to be decidedly firm, the action of United States Steel made many traders on the Consolidated Stock Exchange wonder whether it was being sold under cover of the strength displayed by Reading and some other stocks. As a result trading opinion at the close was rather "mixed." Generally the market was broad and active throughout the day, with sales totaling 40,792 shares distributed over a list of 48 stocks. Considering the fact that an impetus from the London market was lacking, as that market was still enjoying a holiday, the dealings on the opening call were quite active. The sales in the half hour from 9:30 to 10 o'clock totaled 2,570 shares.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

Grains Down—Cotton Stationary—Pork Dull—Coffee Rallies.

Wheat declined to new low levels on heavy receipts and slow demand. Corn was weak on speculative liquidation and better weather. Oats broke to new low levels on record crop estimates. Provisions were dull and about steady. Cottonseed oil was dull and steady. Cotton was less active, closing with small net changed. Coffee opened weak, with heavy liquidation, recovering late, with very heavy trading.

WHEAT.

WHEAT.—The wheat market made new low levels, rallying a little at the close, but left off at a net decline for the day. The close on nearly all deliveries in all markets marked the lowest closing, with the exception of one or two deliveries at different points. The market early was comparatively firm, due to the report of rains in the American Northwest and fear that these rains would influence the harvesting and the quality of the wheat. Predictions of clearing conditions in South Dakota and report of clearing conditions in Montana, which, it was believed, would work across North Dakota and Minnesota by Wednesday and possibly sooner, brought free selling in the Northwest, and Minneapolis declined over 2c from the high of the day. Winter wheat markets were decidedly weak also. This selling was largely due to the heavy receipts. The interior arrivals for the day, largely in the Southwest, were 2,300,000 bushels, or about 1,000,000 bushels in excess of the corresponding day last year. On the break there were reports of good export bidding, and prices rallied at the close on this report, but sales were admitted of only about one dozen loads of hard Winter and Canadian wheat. The visible supply of wheat showed only a small increase, 713,000 bushels, notwithstanding the heavy movement of last week. Stocks of bonded wheat decreased 489,000 bushels. The total in the United States increased only 224,000 bushels, against an increase last year of 4,565,000 bushels. This small increase was due to the heavy interior distribution. Interior shipments for the day were 700,000 bushels more than last year. English markets were closed, but Continental markets were a little higher. The world's exports were 7,392,000 bushels, against 10,352,000 bushels the previous week and 10,928,000 bushels last year. The amount afloat for Europe decreased 1,912,000 bushels. No. 2 red closed at $1.07¾, free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.12½; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.01⅛, and No. 1 Manitoba, $1.16.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—Corn was firm at the opening, but quickly turned weak on improved weather conditions. Prices declined on September 1⅜c from the high of the morning, while new crop deliveries were off ½ to ⅝c. The close was at ⅞c net decline on the September and ¼ to ⅛c net decline on December and May. Heavy selling of September was reported for the leading trader in corn at the West, and this selling demoralized the market. New crop months were sold on reports of good rains in Iowa and predictions of rains in the Central West. The visible supply of corn decreased 1,185,000 bushels, and this compares with a decrease of 1,095,000 bushels last year. Western receipts are increasing a little, owing to the recent advance in cash values. The world's exports of corn were 7,599,000 bushels, against 5,619,000 last week. The amount afloat for Europe increased 1,785,000 bushels and is 32,445,000 bushels, while the entire American visible is only 2,451,000 bushels. Cash corn was nominal, with No. 2 quoted at 81¾, free on board.

OATS.—New low levels were made in the oats market, prices closing at about the lowest of the day and at ⅝ to ¾c net decline. The pressure was the result of record-breaking crop estimates and expectation of enormous receipts. The actual receipts at Western points were small, however, only 341,000 bushels, against 978,000 bushels last year. The visible supply of oats decreased 343,000 and of domestic oats the total is only 991,000 bushels, against an increase of 1,797,000 bushels last year, when the total was 13,000,000 bushels. Quotations for old oats on the spot were nominal. New oats to arrive were quoted at 37 to 40 according to the quality and time of arrival.

PROVISIONS.

Trade was small. The market was a little firmer early on a small movement of hogs, weakening later under small offerings and on reports of dull cash trade. Total Western receipts of hogs were only about 65,000 for the day.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for oil was very quiet. Outside interest was at a standstill and regular trade interest had few orders. The complaints of dull demand for old oil continue, and of very little export interest. The more favorable weather reports from the South are causing some pressure on the new crop deliveries, but until actual selling begins again in volume operators are inclined to be very conservative.

COTTON.

The cotton market started weak and active, but rallied, and during a greater part of the day ruled a few points above the closing of Saturday. The range on October was 18 points from the low of the opening. Later deliveries showed a smaller range, as there was no opening break on the forward months. Buying during the session was not pronounced, and selling was equally moderate. Close observers of the market claim that the market is well evened up, and now the trade is waiting new crop developments or some evidence that the South is beginning to sell against the movement of cotton. The reports from Oklahoma and Texas are conflicting. There have been rains at a number of points, precipitation over a considerable area being in excess of one-half inch, and at quite a number of points over one inch was reported. A large territory, however, has had very little rain, and experts say the crop is going back fast. In Arkansas the relief has been very general from the rains, and also in all other States excepting parts of the Carolinas, where claim is made that more rain is needed. Many reports are coming in of very satisfactory conditions over a greater part of the entire belt outside of Texas and Oklahoma, and where the rains have fallen in these States the situation has improved. There was some selling by the South during the day, thought to be hedge selling, but later it was claimed that this selling was speculative. The movement of new cotton is still small and considerably behind last year. Trade conditions remain excellent, and advices do not indicate material disturbance of the market on account of the violent fluctuations in contracts. Some confidence is expressed over the continuation of active mill demand during the Fall and Winter, not only for domestic account, but on account of European business, while reports from India are claimed to be encouraging for a good business the coming season. The market, however, is under the domination of the crop conditions, and prices are likely to have violent changes as these crop conditions develop. When the South begins to sell against the new crop the situation will be changed. Spot cotton was unchanged; middling uplands quoted at 12.90c.

COFFEE.

Coffee was active, with violent fluctuations, opening steady at a decline of 13 to 18 points, and closing firm and from 7 to 14 points net higher. Sales were reported of 183,500 bags.

The big opening decline was attributed to lower European cables and reports that two or three Santos firms were in difficulties. Havre was 1¼ to 1⅜ francs lower early, but recovered a good part, closing at a net decline of ¼@¾ franc. Hamburg was 1¼ to 1⅜ pfennig lower. Rio was steady and unchanged at the close on Saturday. Santos was nominal at a decline of 100 reis Saturday, the special cable reporting no further change this morning.

Spot coffee steady and higher late; 7s, [illegible].

Total warehouse deliveries in the United States for the week were 106,474 bags, against 105,551 last week and 90,015 last year; of the former amount New York had 60,331 bags.

Receipts at Rio and Santos last week were 238,000 bags, against 180,000 the previous week and 317,000 last year.

RICE.—The rice market was steady, with business moderate and prices unchanged.

Quotations: Screenings, 4@4¼c; ordinary, 4¼@4½c; fair, 4¾@4⅞c; good ordinary, 5@5¼c; prime, 5½@5¾c; choice, 5¾@6c; head, Japan, 4½@5c; Patna, 6@6½c, duty paid.

OILS.—Linseed oil was unchanged. Refined petroleum was steady at $8.35 for standard white in barrels at New York.

Quotations: Standard white petroleum, barrels, New York and Philadelphia, $8.35; bulk, $4.75; standard white, cases, New York, $10.25; water white, barrels, New York and Philadelphia, $9.35; bulk, $5.75; water white, cases, New York and Philadelphia, $11.25. Linseed Oil—American seed, city raw, 70@71c; out-of-town raw, 69@70c; Calcutta, raw, 80c.

NAVAL STORES.—The market for spirits turpentine ruled steady under a fairly good demand. Resin and tar showed no change in price.

Quotations: Spirits turpentine, machine barrels, 46½c. Tar, $5.50. Resin, common to good, strained, $6.35@$6.50; B, $6.80; D, $7.20; E, $7.25; F, $7.40; G, $7.40; H, $7.45; I, $7.50; K, $7.65; M, $7.80; N, $7.95; WG, $8.20, and WW, $8.40.

HELP WANTED

The New York Times does not accept Help Wanted advertisements which do not clearly state the character and conditions of the employment offered. Advertisements calling for a purchase of samples or cash deposit are excluded from the Help Wanted columns. If the employment is on a commission basis the advertisement must so state. The Times uses the utmost care in accepting Help Wanted advertisements to save applicants seeking employment through its columns the time and expense involved in investigating misleading announcements.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Big Increase in Long Island Realty Values—Resale of Broad Street Plot—Investors Buying Tenement House Property—A $1,000,000 Increase Shown by Newark's Building Bureau.

The recent prediction that Long Island real estate would show a record increase in assessed valuations this year is borne out by the statement filed yesterday by the Board of Assessors of the town of Hempstead, which shows an increase of 33 1-3 per cent. over last year.

A trifle over $4,000,000 is added, bringing the total assessment roll up to $19,000,000. The most valuable estates are those of Katherine Mackay and Howard Gould, which are assessed at $300,000 each. The William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., estate of Great Neck is assessed for $150,000. W. Gould Brokaw's estate at Great Neck is assessed at $80,000.

Other property owners who are assessed for more than $50,000 are: Ambassador Robert Bacon, $120,000; Barney estate, $70,000; James R. Keene, $80,000; Stanley Mortimer, $90,000; Mrs. Helen Martin, $75,000; Isaac Guggenheim, $140,000; Thomas Mott, $90,000; William Guggenheim, $100,000; Louis H. Leeds, $75,000; W. Bourke Cockran, $150,000; Payne Whitney Realty Company, $122,000; Alexander Campbell, $90,000, Lillius Grace, $79,000; Janet Grace, $50,000; Thomas Messenger estate, $70,000, and Benjamin Stern, $70,000.

Resale of Broad Street Plot.

The No. 50 Broad Street Company, organized by interests connected with the Degnon Construction Company and the Tubes Realty and Terminal Company, has purchased from the Empire Realty Company 46 to 52 Broad Street, running through to and including 46 to 50 New Street.

These are old four and six-story buildings, on a plot 80.4 on Broad Street and 64.5 on New Street, with a depth of 172.4 by irregular. A twenty-story office building will be erected on the entire plot, the entire transaction involving about $3,000,000.

To Rebuild 537 Fifth Avenue.

The five-story loft building, at 537 Fifth Avenue, owned by Hoffman Rothschild & Co., recently damaged by fire, is to be rebuilt by the owners, and five stories added. The building adjoins the Hotel Lorraine, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street.

Deal in Park Avenue Section.

Jacob Neadle has purchased from Samuel J. Clark, as executor, 116 and 118 East Twenty-seventh Street, two three-story houses, on a plot 41.8 by 98.9, and from the estate of John J. Frech 120 East Twenty-seventh Street, a four-story house, on lot 25 by 98.9, making a plot 66.8 by 98.9, situated 20 feet east of the Fourth Avenue building at the southeast corner of Twenty-seventh Street and Fourth Avenue. This property has not changed hands in over fifty years.

Investors Buy Tenements.

Victor Levy has purchased for investment from M. Berney 1,239 Avenue A, a six-story new-law tenement, on a plot 40 by 100. L. Halperin was the broker.

Realty Company Buys Heights Plot.

A recently incorporated realty company has purchased from Gertie A. Gorman four lots, 100 by 89.11, on the south side of 190th Street, 100 feet west of St. Nicholas Avenue. Plans are now being drawn for a six-story elevator apartment house, to be erected by the new owners.

Bronx.

Moore, Hahn & Moran are the buyers of the five lots on Muliner Avenue, Morris Park, sold at foreclosure last week for $1,300 each. Ground will be broken at once for the erection of five one and two family dwellings.

Richard R. Maslen has purchased from the estate of Mary A. Syme a plot, 66 by 135, on the north side of 180th Street, 132 feet west of Prospect Avenue. One-story taxpayers will be erected on the site.

Brooklyn.

E. J. and H. J. Byrne have purchased for investment from the Moran Realty Company 113 and 115 Bedford Avenue, two four-story brick tenements.

The Gill estate has sold to Walter Rogers 512 Lorimer Street, a two-story and basement dwelling. The buyer will occupy it.

W. L. Mallison has purchased from S. J. Flash 487 Ninth Street, a four-story single brick flat.

The five-story brick tenement, 67 Columbia Place, has been sold to an investor by Van Vlack Brothers & Frey.

Long Island.

The Howard Estates Realty Company has sold on its Jamaica Bay development to M. and E. Fitzpatrick of Brooklyn two lots on the northeast corner of Thadford and Flynn Avenues; to George J. Koch of Manhattan, two lots on the north side of Horstmann Avenue, between Hatch and Thadford Avenues; and to James Fitzpatrick of Brooklyn, two lots on the southwest corner of Hawtree and Flynn Avenues.

Helen S. Carpenter has sold to James J. Hennessy two lots, 20 by 100 each, on the west side of Napor Avenue, 140 feet south of Belmont Avenue, Ozone Park. W. P. Jones was the broker in the sale.

The H. Richter Realty Company has sold the Leopold business property on the west side of Fifth Avenue, 350 feet south of Washington Avenue, Rockaway Park, L. I., to a client. This property has a frontage of 130 feet on Fifth and Sixth Avenues by 200 feet depth. The new owner plans to improve the property with a modern hotel. The property was held at $45,000.

Tenements for Long Island City.

Eight three-story brick tenements will be erected by Kilian Schruger on Woodward Avenue, north of Catalpa Avenue, Ridgewood, at a cost of $64,000. John J. Keegan will build a two-story brick tenement at Newtown Avenue and Crescent Street, Long Island City, at a cost of $8,000. A four-story brick tenement will be erected at Van Alst Avenue, north of Eleventh Street, Long Island City, by the Rondout Construction Company at a cost of $12,000. A four-story brick tenement will be erected in Ninth Avenue south of Washington Avenue, Long Island City, by the Queens Bohemian Realty Company at a cost of $18,000. A three-story brick tenement will be erected on Eighth Avenue east of Vandeventer, Long Island City, by Franz Pfreundschuk at a cost of $8,000.

Recent Buyers.

The Challenge Realty Company is the buyer of the northeast corner of 148th Street and Eighth Avenue, sold last week by S. L. Cohen. The buyers will improve the site with a new law tenement containing four stores.

$1,994,236 for Newark Building.

Permits for the construction of buildings and for alterations and additions to old ones amounting to $1,994,236 were granted by the Building Department of Newark, N. J., during July, an increase of more than $1,000,000 for the same period last year. This is said to be a record in building operations in this city.

During the month 294 permits were granted, as against 246 in the same month last year. Last year's total for the month was $718,165.

Notes.

Shampan & Shampan are preparing plans for a four-story and cellar high class apartment building to be located on site known as east side of Ocean Avenue, 133 feet 7¾ inches south of Cortelyou Road, for the Tip Top Realty Company of Brooklyn as owners.

Real Estate	554,740 lines of best offerings by high-grade firms, exceeding the combined volume of three other New York morning newspapers.
Financial	526,424 lines, an increase of 54,658 compared with the corresponding period last year, over 170,000 lines more than any other New York newspaper, morning or evening.
Railroads & Steamships	313,446 lines, 44,410 lines more than in the corresponding period last year and a greater volume by many thousand lines than any other New York newspaper.
Hotels & Resorts	281,115 lines, a gain of 22,723 lines over the corresponding period in 1911 and a greater volume than the combined volume of two other New York morning newspapers.

The New York Times, with a net paid daily sale exceeding 200,000 copies, represents a purchasing power unsurpassed by any other newspaper in the world.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Barometric pressure continues high over the great central valleys and the East and low over the Far Northwest and the western plateau. This pressure distribution has resulted in a continuance of moderate temperature over the Eastern half of the country and somewhat higher temperature to the westward.

The rainfall during the last twenty-four hours was generally light, and confined to the Florida Peninsula, the Plains States, and the extreme Upper Mississippi Valley.

There will be showers in the next forty-eight hours in the Upper Mississippi Valley, the region of the Great Lakes, and the Florida Peninsula, while in other parts of the country the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

Temperature will be somewhat higher Tuesday and Wednesday in the central valleys and the lake region, but will change little elsewhere throughout the country during the next forty-eight hours.

Winds along the New England Coast will be light west; Middle and South Atlantic Coasts, light variable.

Steamships departing Tuesday for European ports will have light to moderate variable winds and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Tuesday and probably Wednesday; light west winds.

Western New York—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday probably showers; light variable winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1911.	1912.		1911.	1912.
3 A. M.	66	59	4 P. M.	76	73
6 A. M.	66	58	6 P. M.	73	73
9 A. M.	69	68	9 P. M.	71	66
12 M.	76	70	12 M.	70	..

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 66; for the corersponding date last year it was 72; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 74.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 63; at 8 P. M. it was 70. Maximum temperature, 74 degrees at 4:30 P. M.; minimum, 58 degrees at 6 A. M. Humidity, 61 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 48 per cent. at 8 P.M.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has approved the transfer of James O'Neill from the position of driver to that of sweeper at the request of the Street Cleaning Commissioner. This action is based on the report of the labor clerk, in which he states that the Commissioner knows there is a large preferred list in existence for Brooklyn, but requests the suspension of this rule prohibiting transfers while a preferred list exists, owing to the fact that O'Neill was injured in the performance of his duties, which renders him physically unfit for his duties of driver, but he can do the work of a sweeper.

The commission has also approved the requests for restoration to the eligible lists as follows:

James E. Burns, 600 West 157th Street, first grade clerk, declined appointment June 14, 1912, for the reason that he was then "holding good position," states that he is now out of employment.

Patrick F. Keegan, 401 Cornelia Street, Brooklyn, Inspector of Meters and Water Consumption, for temporary work, resigned from temporary position in the Board of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity July 28, 1911.

Ethel Beyern, 1,386 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx, stenographer and typewriter, second and third grades, for temporary work; declined temporary appointment in the Queens Borough President's office Aug. 29, 1910.

Timothy F. Morrissey, 2,192 Seventh Avenue, bookkeeper, third grade, for temporary work; declined temporary appointment in the Finance Department June 25, 1912.

Morris Itzkowitz, 745 East Sixth Street, clerk, second grade, for temporary work.

The commission has denied the request of P. C. Richard, 81 Madison Street, that his declination of appointment to the position of bookkeeper, third grade, in the Richmond Borough President's office be amended to read "temporary inability" instead of "on account of salary, $1,200 a year."

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination at the New York Custom House on Aug. 21 and 22, to fill a vacancy in the position of assistant physical geologist, Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., at an entrance salary of $1,500 a year. No assurance regarding promotion can be given, but a person appointed to this position, who proves able to perform satisfactorily the work, may expect reasonable promotion, and may ultimately reach a salary of from $2,400 to $3,000 a year. The duties will consist in conducting experimental investigations along the lines of elasticity and heat conductivity of metals and rocks, the diffusivity of liquids and solids, and such other phenomena as may be directly applicable to the study of geophysical problems. Men only will be admitted to this examination, which will consist of the following subjects, weighted as indicated: Experimental physics, 20; mathematical physics, 10; differential and integral calculus, 10; translation into English from both French and German, 10; education, training, laboratory experience and fitness, 50. An educational training equivalent to four years' collegiate work in science, which must include special courses in experimental physics, is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their thirty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The Committee on Care of Buildings will hold a meeting next week to consider the subject of janitors' salaries for the annual budget. Commissioner George C. Miller is Acting Chairman of this committee in place of Frank W. Meyer, who recently resigned from the Board of Education.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Education will hold a meeting on Aug. 14. President Winthrop will preside.

Fannie L. Requa, who died at her home, 168 Jay Street, Brooklyn, on Saturday, had served as a public school teacher for forty-three years and six months. She was appointed in November, 1855, and the date of her retirement was Dec. 31, 1899. She was born Aug. 2, 1841. At the time of her retirement she was teaching in Public School 160, Rivington and Suffolk Streets, Manhattan.

The corrected schedule of the examinations of applicants for the positions of laboratory assistant and assistant teacher has been received at the Department of Education Building from the printer. The examinations will be held on Oct. 14, 15, and 16 at the De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, and at the Department of Education Building, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. The examinations at the De Witt Clinton High School will be as follows: Oct. 14, science of education; Oct. 15, biology, elocution, English, German, Latin, Spanish, and mathematics; Oct. 16, mathematics. Hall of Board of Education: Oct. 14, commercial branches, freehand drawing, music, physical training, machine shop practice, metal work; Oct. 15, commercial branches, freehand drawing, music, laboratory assistant; Oct. 16, commercial branches, freehand drawing. The minimum salary of a laboratory assistant is $900, the maximum $1,400, and the rate of annual increase $50. The minimum salary of an assistant teacher, licensed under the regulations, is $1,300; the maximum $2,650, and the rate of annual increase $150. No person is eligible for a license for service in the high schools who is not more than 21 and less than 41 years old, except that, in the case of an applicant for license as assistant teacher, who holds a permanent license granted in and for the public schools of this city, the maximum limit of age shall be the 51st birthday.

Vacation School 188, in East Houston Street, of which Miss Sara M. Hatch is Principal, has 1,050 pupils in the continuation classes and 500 pupils in the kindergarten and industrial classes.

CHANGES OF NAME.

FRANCISZEK STEFANKIEWICZ of 110 Third Street to FRANK W. RUSSELL; his name is foreign and difficult to pronounce. He has assumed a simpler one, and wishes to have it legalized. Supreme Court Justice Bischoff.

BARNET SIROTINSKY, a medical student of 20 Pike Street, to BARNET SIROTT; has been called Sirott for brevity. He wishes to have the name of Sirott on his diploma, and he must have his name legally changed to do this. Supreme Court Justice Bischoff.

RESULTS

The New York Times produces results for its advertisers because its circulation, in excess of 200,000, is among people who think, people who do, people who purchase and people who employ.

Reliability is the first qualification required of an advertiser. It matters not how rich he is, he must be reliable and say what he means.

Reputation means more to The Times than revenue. The same censorship applies to the advertising columns as to the news pages.

The type used for "Wants" is called agate. By counting seven words to the line in small type, or four words if set in capitals, you may readily estimate what your advertisement will cost you by consulting the following table of

GOV. WILSON CANCELS ORDER FOR TROOPS

Calls for Extreme Simplicity at Notification Ceremonies at Sea Girt To-morrow.

MARSHALL TO BE HIS GUEST

The Candidate's Speech of Acceptance Warmly Praised by His Advisers —No Decision on Treasurer.

Special to The New York Times.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 5.—The plans for welcoming to the Little White House the fifty-two men of the committee named to notify Gov. Wilson that he is the Democratic Presidential candidate had progressed so far to-day that Gen. Wilbur F. Sadler, the Governor's chief military aid, was instructed to go ahead with his arrangements to rope off the grounds, provide a body of ushers, and issue passes to all those entitled to come within the space reserved for the official notification party and guests.

But Gen. Sadler was told to abandon his previous plan to bring soldiers to the lawns about the Little White House, and was instructed not to have any military display or brass, or anything savoring of pomp and ceremony. It was Gov. Wilson's wish that the arrangements be extremely simple, and that only civilian ushers be employed.

There will be several thousand Jerseymen on the grounds and in the official party, besides members of the Notification Committee, there will be a group of guests whose invitations were sent to them by Ollie James, Chairman of the Notification Committee. These guests include the Governors of Democratic States and many members of Congress. Gov. Wilson will entertain at luncheon all the members of the official party, and for the exercises chairs will be provided for the official guests on the east veranda of the Little White House. Gov. Wilson will speak from the veranda, addressing directly the crowd which will be assembled on the lawn.

Gov. Wilson himself will have only one personal guest for the exercises—Gov. Marshall of Indiana, his running mate. On hearing to-night that Gov. Marshall would arrive to-morrow evening and would be a guest at the New Monmouth Hotel in the near-by village of Spring Lake, Gov. Wilson made arrangements to hurry his regular Tuesday visit to Trenton in order to arrive in time to pay a long call on the Indiana Governor. Gov. Wilson will not be able to reach Sea Girt in time to dine with Gov. Marshall, but he will join him at the New Monmouth Hotel immediately after dinner and spend the evening with him.

"I was the guest of my associate on the ticket," he said, "while I was passing through his State, and I found him a charming man to visit. I am looking forward to his coming here with real joy."

Gov. Wilson said he was delighted to learn that the Campaign Committee had planned to send Gov. Marshall to Maine. At the hotel, Gov. Marshall will be a guest of John E. Lamb of Indiana, who is at Spring Lake for the Summer.

One thing in connection with the notification exercises Gov. Wilson wished to have made clear, and this was that no formal invitations had been sent out, and that none would be issued, the plan being to extend a welcome to all who attend on an equal basis. The invitations sent out by Ollie James, it was explained, all went to public officials, or officials of the Baltimore Convention. It was understood that Mrs. Wilson sent out a number of invitations, but Mrs. Wilson said this was an error, as she had merely answered letters to her from women asking if they would be welcome. She had informed them that all who came would be welcome.

The vexed question as to who is to be the Treasurer of the National Committee remains as much a mystery to-night, so far as any official announcement was concerned, as it was before the political wise men hereabouts began to whisper the name of Charles R. Crane. They were still whispering the name of Crane to-night, but with confessions that they feared they had guessed wrong.

It was learned that the name of Mr. Crane was taken up by the Campaign Committee, and through members of the committee reached Gov. Wilson. The Governor is said, on what seems to be good authority, to have had another man in mind when he went to visit Chairman McCombs. The only thing Gov. Wilson would say about this matter was that "you fellows couldn't guess it by a mile."

The Governor took occasion to-day to criticise newspapers for inaccuracies.

"For example," he said, "I once delivered an address in which I said that public opinion was not developed in great congested communities, but in the crossroads store where the farmers sat around, chewed tobacco, spat into the sawdust, and exchanged ideas. I added, jokingly, that no matter what might be said against tobacco chewing, it must be admitted that it made men think.

"Imagine my horror when the newspapers ignored the rest of my speech—which I thought not without merit—and gave prominence to what I said about tobacco chewing, declaring in the headlines that I said tobacco chewing made thinkers."

The Governor added that a big tobacco company also made a photograph of one of the newspaper reports and used it in its advertising, stamping him "as a college President who advocated chewing tobacco to develop the mind."

It was learned that while the Governor was in New York he read his speech of acceptance to Chairman McCombs, William G. McAdoo, Josephus Daniels, and others, and that all were enthusiastic in their praise of it.

Cotter T. Bride of Washington, D. C., a close personal friend of Mr. Bryan, made this statement to-day:

"When Mr. Bryan returns from the Rockies, early in September, he will set out at once on the trail of Roosevelt, and will keep the trail through all debatable States. Taft has been eliminated entirely, and the contest is going to be between Wilson and Roosevelt. I received a letter a few days ago from Mrs. Bryan, saying that Mr. Bryan would do his full part to make certain the election of Wilson and Marshall."

Abram I. Elkus of New York called on Gov. Wilson for an hour after dinner.

DR. JACOBUS FOR WILSON.

Dean of Hartford Theological Seminary Leaves Republican Party.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Aug. 5. — Announcement was made at Norfolk, Conn., to-night by the Rev. Dr. Melancthon W. Jacobus, Dean of the Hartford Theological Seminary, that he would this Fall work for the election of Woodrow Wilson.

The Dean has been a lifelong Republican. He is going to vote for the New Jersey Governor, not because he is a Princeton man, but because he is "confident that the Wilson Administration will be wise, prudent, and conserving of the interests of the Nation as a whole."

"He is the man for the place," says Dr. Jacobus, "and I know that he embodies all the essential qualities for the Presidency. He will be elected and will make an ideal President."

AWAIT THE ASTOR BABY.

Many Curious People Gather About Mrs. J. J. Astor's Home.

Dr. Edwin B. Cragin spent his first day yesterday at the Astor home, 840 Fifth Avenue, having arrived on Sunday evening from his country home in Colchester, Mass., to remain until the birth of the Astor heir, which is expected this week.

Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor, accompanied by her nurse, took an automobile ride yesterday through Central Park.

Since it became known that a posthumous child of the late Col. John Jacob Astor was daily expected, there have been many curious visitors around the Astor home. A small crowd, mostly of women, stood last evening for a time on the opposite side of Fifth Avenue, discussing the coming event, and the old watchman who patrols the corner of Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, was besieged with inquiries.

Earlier in the evening a group of children were playing in front of the house and one little girl about three years old sat down for a while on the doorstep. The old watchman was about to order the child and her companions away, but several women persuaded him to allow them to remain, as they declared it was a good omen.

BANK MESSENGER ARRESTED.

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Held for Theft of $500.

Accused with having disappeared with $500 from the banking establishment of William P. Bonbright & Co., of 14 Wall Street, on June 7, a boy who said he was Earl Hubbard, fifteen years old, a bank messenger, of Lynn, Mass., was arrested last night as he was leaving a steamer of the Maine Steamship Company at Market Street and the East River. The boy was brought to this city by Burns men. According to the police, Hubbard, before leaving this city to go to the home of an aunt in Belfast, Me., spent $200 on clothing and jewelry.

The police say the boy made this explanation:

"I read somewhere about bank presidents starting at the bottom and working up until they became presidents. I wanted to do this, and so I came here and got a position. When in Lynn, Mass., my home, I was a student in the high school. After school hours I had a position and handled five times as much money as I took."

SEVEN LINERS ARRIVE.

Bringing a Total of 9,287 Passengers from Europe.

Seven transatlantic liners arrived yesterday, bringing a total of 9,287 passengers, 3,551 cabin and 5,736 steerage, a record for this year. Besides these there were 254 passengers from Bermuda on the Orotava and 176 from Buenos Aires on the Vasari. The largest number was brought on the George Washington from Bremen, 424 first, 466 second, and 1,181 third class, a total of 2,071 passengers.

The Holland-America liner Rotterdam had 1,941, the Amerika 1,878, and the St. Louis 266. The others were the Anchor liner California, the Hamburg-American liner America, and the French liner Rochambeau.

The Customs Inspectors, numbering 200, with thirty-two Appraisers under Deputy Surveyor Raczkiewicz and his staff, had hard work from early morning till 10 o'clock last night in examining the baggage of 3,551 cabin passengers.

CATHOLICS IN CONFERENCE.

Social Questions and the Church Discussed at Fordham.

A conference of Catholic leaders in social work was begun yesterday at Fordham University. The aim of the meeting is to study the social unrest, politics, and especially the Socialistic Party as these affect the principles of sociology laid down by the Church.

The two regular lecturers are the Rev. H. J. Maekel, S. J., of Canisius College, Buffalo, and the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, Professor of Sociology in St. Paul, Minnesota. Their courses are on the social question in relation to the State and the Church, on the labor movements, wages, and a just settlement of the present industrial disputes.

Father Maekel gave the opening lecture yesterday, outlining the general principles of social teaching, the natural part of it as well as that of the religious side put forth by the Church.

In the afternoon Prof. Ryan of St. Paul spoke on industrial questions. He made a plea for social justice, and was almost at once the target of many questions, not hostile, but such as showed interest on the part of those present.

Yonkers Population 87,120.

A canvass just completed for the annual Yonkers directory shows the population of that city to be 87,120 at the present time, which is an increase of 6,000 over last year, and nearly 10,000 over the population given the city by the Federal census in 1910.

Upper West Side

The Concentrated Purchasing Power of New York

From West Seventy-second Street north to West 200th Street the west side of Manhattan comprises what is undoubtedly the greatest and most prosperous residential district in America.

If not in the world.

The upper west side is the home of the well to do—the SPENDERS—and in this one section alone there are probably hundreds of thousands whose average income exceeds $3,000 per year or $250 per month or $80 per week.

That's $300,000,000 a year.

To the merchant who decides that this territory is worth cultivating a study of the following current statements of sales of morning newspapers through newsdealers supplying the residents of this section will prove interesting—and profitable.

BRYAN WAS BOSS OF 1908 CAMPAIGN FUND

His Wishes Regarding Contributions Faithfully Obeyed, Mack Tells Senate Committee.

GUFFEY'S $5,000 RETURNED

But Was Accepted Later — Not a Penny from Corporations—Many Offers Turned Down.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures to-day heard Norman E. Mack, Democratic National Chairman in 1908, on the contributions for that year. Mr. Mack said that the published statements of contributions and expenditures by his committee were absolutely correct. He did say, however, that the statement that Democratic contributions came from only 25,000 persons was incorrect, as 100,000 persons had contributed an average of $6 apiece. As far as he could recall, only one contribution actually made had been returned. That was $5,000 contributed by Col. James M. Guffey of Pittsburgh, and it was rejected on the ground of Mr. Bryan's personal enmity to the Pennsylvanian.

Until Election Day, when Mr. Bryan was defeated, Mr. Mack said, the Nebraskan's wishes were absolutely followed in regard to contributions, and not a cent was accepted from corporations, and several offers of money were refused. Even Col. Guffey's contribution, he said, was rejected partly on the ground that Col. Guffey, either rightly or wrongly, was supposed to have relations with Standard Oil. After Mr. Bryan's defeat, Mr. Mack said, he did not feel bound by his wishes in the same way, and when Col. Guffey repeated his offer Mr. Mack accepted the $5,000 offer for the payment of debts which otherwise would have gone by default.

After the hearing Mr. Mack explained why he was glad to testify to the fact that 100,000 persons had contributed to the campaign funds.

"I am firmly of the opinion," he said, "that a fund of $1,000,000 gathered in small sums ranging from $1 to $10 each is far more valuable to the managers of a campaign than a fund twice as large would be if collected from a few corporations and wealthy individuals. The reason for this belief is that $1,000,000 is an ample fund for all legitimate expenses of a National campaign. It is a fact easily understood, too, that the man who has made a contribution to the expenses of his party cannot be persuaded to vote against that party. He feels that he has a vested personal interest in the success of the cause for which he has given his dollar.

"In the course of a brief conversation with Senator Clapp, after the hearing this morning, I learned that the Senator was of the opinion that campaign funds should be used solely for the payment of the expenses of the speakers engaged, the office expenses, and postage and printing bills. In that opinion I am in hearty accord with the Senator from Minnesota."

During the hearing Chairman Clapp asked who were the largest contributors to the 1908 campaign.

"The largest was Mr. Murphy," replied Mr. Mack. "He contributed $10,000." The books before the Senate committee show that such a sum was contributed in the name of Tammany Hall.

"Senator Clark of Montana contributed $2,000 to the Chicago headquarters, and I think about $2,000 to the New York headquarters," Mr. Mack added. "Several people offered funds, but they were refused, and they have rather passed out of my mind."

"Why were they refused?" asked Senator Jones.

"You probably suspect why," returned Mr. Mack. "I was in Denver at the convention, and on the way home stopped at Lincoln to talk with Mr. Bryan. He then and later said that he did not want contributions from corporations. It was his fight and his campaign, and I felt I should keep faith with him and not accept any offer from a corporation or other source that was not desirable. I made up my mind that I would not do anything that would put him in the position, if he were elected, of being under obligation to those to whom he would not want to be under obligation."

It was here that Mr. Mack told of the Guffey transaction.

PASS ARMY AVIATION BILL.

House Favors Double Pay for Officers Who Volunteer as Pilots.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Double pay for army officers who volunteer as pilots in the aviation fleet of the United States is provided in a bill by Representative Hardwick of Georgia, Democrat, which passed the House to-day. No provision was made for the pilots of dirigible balloons.

The bill limits the number of army officers who shall be detailed to the aviation service at any one time to thirty, and an amendment was accepted which extended the provisions of the measure to include thirty additional officers from the navy and the Marine Corps.

WAY TO AMEND CONSTITUTION

La Follette Would Let Electors in Majority of States Approve.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Senator La Follette offered a resolution to-day which proposed a radical change in the method of amending the Constitution of the United States.

By its terms a majority of the two Houses of Congress, or ten States, acting through their Legislatures or through poular vote, would have authority to propose amendments. An amendment to be adopted must be approved by a "majority of the electors in a majority of the States," and "a majority of all electors" voting on the question.

At present an amendment must be ratified by three-fourths of the States, acting through their Legislatures.

END TWO-CENT FARE FIGHT.

Pennsylvania Agrees to Run Excursions—Suit Abandoned.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 5.—The fight of Ohio railroads to obtain a modification of the State's maximum two-cent fare law by refusing to run one-day excursions this season in this State, practically came to an end to-day, when the Pennsylvania Railroad made official announcement that it will run excursions.

The Pennsylvania is the last road to rescind the action of the Central Passenger Association, which at a meeting in Chicago in May decided to abandon the excursion business this season. Last week Attorney General Hogan announced that he would bring suit against the Panhandle, a branch of the Pennsylvania, to oust that road from Ohio because of its refusal to run trains at less than its two-cent fare rate. With to-day's announcement by the Pennsylvania it is probable that the suit will not be brought.

HOTEL SHOOTING ACCIDENTAL

G. R. Harkness Explains to Coroner the Killing of Mrs. Hopp.

George Raymond Harkness, a real estate broker of Sea Cliff, L. I., who was charged with shooting and killing Mrs. Florence Hopp in a room in the Hotel York on July 20, was discharged by Coroner Winterbottom yesterday after a coroners' jury had declared the shooting accidental.

Mrs. Hopp, a divorcée, lived at Lewisburg, Penn. Harkness has a wife and child living at Sea Cliff. He testified that he was explaining the workings of an automatic pistol to Mrs. Hopp on the night of the shooting, and in some unaccountable manner it went off and she fell to the floor dead.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE INQUEST.

Coroner Can Take No Action Against Healers for Two Deaths.

Coroner Iles of Yonkers held an inquest last night on the deaths of Clayton J. Whipple and his daughter Helen of 59 Fanshaw Avenue of scarlet fever while under Christian Science treatment.

The Coroner subpoenaed as witnesses Mrs. Lillian Young Charters, a practitioner of Christian Science, of 400 Riverside Drive, New York, and Mrs. Louise Young Whitney of 15 Stanley Place, Yonkers. Mrs. Charters treated Mr. Whipple and Mrs. Whitney cared for his daughter. Another witness was the widow. She was the last witness, and she told, without apparent feeling, that, upon the advice of Mrs. Whitney, she called in Dr. David John for her daughter two hours before she died.

"The doctor told me," she said, "that my daughter was seriously ill, and I had my choice to take his prescription or continue the Christian Science treatment, and I decided to have my daughter treated as I had been accustomed to be treated myself."

The girl died on July 8, and her father, contracting the disease from her, died eight days later.

Both practitioners said they were law-abiding citizens, and that they had lost no time in notifying the health authorities once they learned that their patients suffered from a contagious disease.

It was the happiest gathering that ever assembled at an inquest in Yonkers. Mrs. Whipple wore a gray suit, and talked without reserve, smiling frequently. Mrs. Charters was gayly dressed, as were the other two of the same faith, who came in to hear and see.

The Coroner said at the close of the hearing that he did not think there was anything he could do in the way of prosecuting any one for criminal neglect. Though no doctor was called, the law had been complied with, he said, as to the notification of the health authorities.

GETS HER CHILD AGAIN.

Foster Mother So Glad to Get Her She Forgets to Ask Benefactors' Names.

Three-year-old Mabel Conklin was returned to her foster mother yesterday by the woman to whom Mrs. Conklin gave the youngster some two weeks ago, when John Conklin lost his job as starter for the Third Avenue Street Railway Co. and poverty fell on their flat, at 504 West 139th Street. The women who had taken little Mabel read Mrs. Conklin's appeal for the return of her adopted daughter in THE TIMES yesterday, and they hurried with the little girl to Mrs. Conklin's home.

Mrs. Conklin was alone in the house and ill in bed. John had to attend to his new job as motorman on the Third Avenue line, but the woman, who had been pining away for her baby, sprang out of bed and grabbed the little girl in her arms when the women, with the child, entered the flat.

Mrs. Conklin had forgotten to get the names of these women when she gave them little Mabel, and in her joy at the return of the child yesterday she forgot again to learn their identity. After they had gone all that Mrs. Conklin remembered was that they had seemed irritated at having to return the child, and suddenly, fearing that they might try to regain possession of the little girl, Mrs. Conklin took her yesterday to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Conklin's parents, who live at 343 East 131st Street, the Bronx.

WOULD SUE ARMSTRONG.

Mrs. Homer Davenport Asks to Have Him Made a Party Defendant.

Mrs. Daisy B. Davenport, widow of Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, who divorced him, asked the New Jersey Court of Chancery yesterday to make Paul Armstrong, the playwright, a party defendant to a suit she is bringing to recover thirty Arabian horses kept by her husband on a farm at Holmdel, Monmouth County. The horses were claimed after Davenport's death by Mrs. Zodah Howard Reakirt, or Requa. The farm on which they were kept is now occupied by Armstrong.

Under Davenport's will his wife was his sole heir. She sued Mrs. Reakirt, or Requa, to recover the horses. According to Martin Grimsgarrd, Davenport's riding master, and others, Mrs. Reakirt, or Requa, was frequently at Holmdel, and stated repeatedly that Davenport had promised to marry her after he was freed from his former marriage.

LOVE FOR SEA PREVAILS.

Chief Barber of the Titanic Obtains Post on the Lusitania.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Unable to resist traveling over the sea, August F. Weikman of Palmyra, N. J., who was the chief barber on the ill-fated Titanic and who was rescued after being several hours in the water, is unable to content himself ashore. Mr. Weikman said after his experiences that he would never go to sea again, but he has arranged to resume his old position as chief barber, and will sail from New York on the Lusitania to-morrow.

Mr. Weikman has been traversing the ocean for a number of years, and says that when on land he is like a fish out of water, and it is impossible for him to be content except on the ocean.

"After all," he said to-night, "an accident like the Titanic's may never occur again, and I think I will risk it, anyway."

TEACHERS' OFFICIAL RESIGNS

Irwin Shepard Quits as Secretary of National Educational Association.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Irwin Shepard of Winona, Minn., secretary of the National Education Association, has resigned his office, it was announced to-day, and Durand W. Springer of Detroit has been appointed his successor by the Board of Trustees of the association.

In his letter to James M. Greenwood, chairman of Board of Trustees, under date of July 12, Mr. Shepard said that his resignation was for personal reasons and had been delayed by conditions "impeaching the honor of the association." These conditions he said, had been righted and he was free to leave the office. The letter said in part:

> It was my wish and purpose to resign over a year ago, but circumstances and conditions had developed in the administrative affairs of the association which impeached the honor and threatened the welfare, if not the very existence, of the association, whose fair record of over fifty years of unselfish service has been without stain or blemish of any kind.

Words of appreciation for the trust reposed in him and his pleasure in the work which he relinquished were included in the letter.

Mr. Shepard had been secretary of the organization for fourteen years. His term of office would have expired in June, 1914.
